Ja'abari: Politics not restful

Jerusalem Post Reporter
People who dabble in politics don't sleep at night and have no peace in the daytime, Sheikh Mohammed Ali Ja'abari, Mayor of Hebron, said yesterday. The guest of the Jerusalem Rotary Club, Sheikh Ja'abari chose this way to tell the Rotarians why they should be thankful for the non-political nature of their organization.
In his proverb-studded Arabic, translated into flowery English by one of his young aides, the Sheikh was lyrical in his praise for Rotary's humanitarian efforts. And in keeping with his advice, he side-stepped questions on current politics.

But the subject did sneak in. Asked if the Jews and Arabs could cooperate in economic and social life, the Sheikh's reply was that if there is goodwill and "if anyone who has a right takes it back," they could live together as in the past. He repeated his view that it was the colonialist "divide and rule" policy that had sown the present discord.
Would he agree to the opening of a Hebron Rotary? The Sheikh said he could see no objection.

French socialist leader Francois Mitterrand assured Premier Golda Meir yesterday of the French Socialist party's constant friendship for Israel, and that his colleagues seek to explain Israel's case to the French public.
Mr. Mitterrand opened his visit to Jerusalem with an hour-and-a-half long meeting with Mrs. Meir at her office. He asked questions on Israel's position and gave the Premier a survey of developments inside France and its Socialist movement. The visitor explained that much of the misunderstanding of Israel's position was due to lack of the right sort of information on events here. Once again Mr. Mitterrand took the opportunity to reiterate that the media had completely distorted his speech on the question of Palestinian rights.
Later he called on Knesset Speaker Reuven Barkat. Their talks focused on parliamentary work. Mr. Mitterrand lunched with Knesset Foreign and Security Affairs Committee Chairman Haim Zadok and a select group of committee members. They included Israel Yeshayahu, Mordechai Ben-Porat, Ishar Harari, Moshe Carmel (Labour) and Menahem Begin (Gahal). Participle gave the impression of being extremely friendly towards Israel. Their discussions with him included the question of Israel's relations with the E.E.C.
Later the French leader and his party visited Yad Vashem and the Western Wall. In the afternoon, the French visitors toured Christian holy sites in the Old City.

ROME (UPI). — Two thousand police solved 2,806 smaller problems in a massive hunt throughout the city this week, but they did not find the bandits who shot and killed a policeman in a day-light bank-car robbery and fled with $37,000.
Police did not say if the investigation yielded any concrete clues to the identity of the killers. They said officers checked the identities of 56,000 persons and registration data of 30,000 cars during the massive crackdown on the underworld.
Side results of the operation included the arrests of 64 persons on various charges, the filing of charges against another 65 and the expulsion of 23 foreigners as undesirable.
Nineteen Italians were ordered to leave Rome, six minors who fled home were traced and sent back to their families and 2,560 persons were given travel tickets.
Police also recovered 66 stolen cars and other loot and seized weapons including one sub-machinegun and one airplane incendiary bomb.

Wallace gains 41% in Florida

By SAM LIPSKI
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

The big winner in the Florida Democratic primary on Tuesday was Governor George Wallace of Alabama with an unexpectedly high 41 per cent of the vote. But it was the big loser, Senator Edmund Muskie and the main beneficiary of the loss, Senator Hubert Humphrey, who provided the more significant news for the presidential race.
After an unimpressive win in New Hampshire last week the party front-runner from Maine came fourth in Florida with barely nine per cent, behind Senator Henry Jackson of Washington state (13.5 per cent) and Mr. Humphrey's second place finish (13 per cent).
There are still 21 primaries to go. But the Florida results mean that former Vice-President Humphrey has now become Senator Muskie's serious rival for the front-runner's title, his campaign fund sources, and the endorsement of leading politicians. Further doubts are now raised about the depth of Senator Muskie's vote-getting power and the effectiveness of his campaign organization which performed poorly in Florida.
Senator Jackson and his staff were pleased at their relatively strong showing in a state where the Jackson name was virtually unknown a few weeks ago. Beating Senator Muskie has lifted Senator Jackson into prominence in the media and given his campaign a boost for the coming primaries.
In the Republican primary it was no contest. President Nixon swept to victory with 87 per cent, overwhelming his conservative challenger Congressman John Ashbrook (9 per cent) and his liberal opponent Congressman Paul McCloskey, (4 per cent).

The three other main Democratic contenders who trailed behind Senator Muskie, although doing badly were hurt less than the front-runner. Mayor John Lindsay of New York took solace in beating the other left-liberal candidate, Senator George McGovern by a slight margin. They both shared about 6 per cent each of the vote. For his part Senator McGovern never expected to do well in Florida. Black Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm, with about 4 per cent of the vote, had not expected to do even as well as that.
The immediate task facing the Democratic party and political analysts was to assess the implications of the impressive Wallace victory. Not only did he surpass expectations — no opinion poll gave him more than 35 per cent — but he showed his strength in nearly every congressional district.
In addition to winning the popularity contest, the flamboyant Alabama governor who had campaigned on an aggressive anti-school busing platform won 75 of Florida's 83 convention delegates. Senator Humphrey won six delegates only after receiving a bloc of votes from the heavily Jewish precincts of Miami Beach.

MAEBASHI, Japan (AP). — Police said they were still questioning ultra-leftist radicals yesterday to determine whether there were any others purged, murdered and buried by their fellow radicals. Twelve victims of the grisly torture-slayings have been unearthed by police from the mountains north-west of Tokyo.
Police said that Miss Hiroko Nagata, 27, alleged to be one of the top leaders of the far left "United Red Army" began talking Tuesday after refusing to respond to questioning for 25 days following her arrest February 19, and she remarked in hysteria that she had more details on the killings than Tsuneo Mori, a radical leader seized with Miss Nagata. Most of the 12 bodies were recovered by police following Mori's disclosure. Miss Nagata, a former pharmaceutical student from Tokyo, police said, Tuesday hinted that the torture killings totaled 14.
Yesterday, police said, she wrote a note to be delivered to Mori that "our revolution has failed... I feel a grave responsibility... but our 14 comrades did not die in vain."
Police said Miss Nagata was apparently referring to 12 killed in the grisly slaughter while hiding out since last September along with two others, one who died after scuffling with police in December 1970 and another who was fatally injured in inter-group bickering in 1969.

NATIONAL CANDIDATE

Mr. Wallace's own assessment was that the result made him a "national" rather than merely a "regional" candidate, that it meant the contest for the nomination was now wide open; that the American people were "fed up" with the direction of events; and that it was a message to liberals in the party that it was time to revise their thinking.
The message, apparently, did not get to Senator Muskie in the most bitter denunciation of Mr. Wallace by any of the candidates, a grim-faced Muskie told his supporters that he knew he had lost. But this did not disturb him. Instead he was appalled by Mr. Wallace... "A demagogue of the worst possible kind, I pledge that as long as his kind of politics and his kind of values threaten the nobility of our country I will fight him with everything I've got... I don't know the man. But I hate what he stands for."
Senator Muskie's denunciation showed he certainly does not lack courage. But it was not a tribute to his political acumen or powers of analysis. The Wallace appeal, as the results demonstrated, went far beyond a racist minority or even the wider population in favour of integration but opposed to the busing of white schoolchildren to black neighbourhoods as a means to achieve it.
Mr. Wallace is a populist. He

Fallen metal bar derailed train

PARIS (Reuters). — Transport Minister Jean Chamant said yesterday that a metal bar which fell from a goods train caused the derailment of a jet-engine express train Tuesday in which four people were killed and 41 injured.
Mr. Chamant told a cabinet meeting yesterday the accident had nothing to do with the working of the turbo-train itself.
A one-metre-long metal bar weighing 20 kg. had fallen from a passing goods wagon minutes before the 160 kms. an hour express passed. Railway officials said yesterday. The bar struck in a set of points and sent the train hurtling off the rails, they added.

SAIGON. — Heavy fighting was reported yesterday on three Indo-China fronts including the biggest artillery duel in months along the DMZ. Air strikes that reverberated throughout Saigon marked the start of a new operation less than 16 kms east of the capital.
Seven children were killed and four others and a teacher were wounded when a bomb exploded at a primary school outside Dai Loc district town in northern South Vietnam Tuesday, the Saigon military spokesman said yesterday.
The spokesman said Communist terrorists set off the explosive device just before midday at the school for children of local military personnel.
Troop action erupted 24 kms. across the border and about 140 kms. northwest of Saigon, where a 7,000-man South Vietnamese sweep has been under way since last Friday, aimed at destroying North Vietnamese and Vietcong base camps, used for staging attacks in the 8rd military region that includes Saigon and 31 surrounding provinces.

Sanbar: Israel may have to import labour

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter
The Governor of the Bank of Israel, Mr. Moshe Sanbar, warned yesterday that Israel may have to import labour from abroad. Speaking to workers at the Jerusalem Trade Union Club yesterday, Mr. Sanbar noted that, at present, there are 25,000 unfilled jobs in the country — a fact which is seriously hampering Israel's economic development.
If this situation persists, he said, Israel may have to import labour from the countries with which it has economic and trade ties.
The state of the economy, he said, is less severe than it was two years ago, when the package deal was signed: the Gross National Product is rising at an average rate of 8-9 per cent per annum, and both industrial production and exports have risen. The foreign currency deficit has been reduced, and the economy is running at full employment. But despite all this, the country is still in a state of virtual economic war. He said that, should the Government's policies of combating inflation be defeated, it could lead to failures on "other fronts" as well.
The Governor said that, despite the fact that Israel's foreign debt had increased by 50 per cent over the past two years (to $3,500m.), this should not seriously affect the country's ability to get credit from abroad.
With regard to reparations from Germany, Mr. Sanbar said that had helped in the past 10 years. Israel received 10,000 tons of reparations from Germany. This has helped the country's economy, especially in the area of housing, but he has also helped in the area of various social groups.
In reply to questions from the floor, Mr. Sanbar said he estimated prices would rise by 6 or 7 per cent this year, while the real income would increase by 12 per cent, and consumption by 3.5 per cent.
He said that, as yet, there has been no final decision to tax an added value (sales) tax. The decision was dependent on economic performance.
Most of Jerusalem's housing is rented, he said, which was pointed out by Mr. David Eilat, head of the Jerusalem Labour Committee. Earlier yesterday, Mr. Sanbar had a delegation from the National Monetary Fund. He noted that one of the main problems facing the economy was how to get exports profitable. The delegation arrived on Tuesday for a round of talks.

Hussein's plan for twin kingdom

AMMAN

King Hussein yesterday put forward proposals to turn the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan into a federal state, linking both banks of the Jordan River.

The 49-year-old monarch told a meeting of notables at the Royal Palace that the new state should be called the United Arab Kingdom. He said his plan would be referred to the Jordanian national assembly, which would take measures to set up a new constitution.

The new state would comprise two wings — the East Bank with Amman as its capital and the West Bank, under Israeli administration since the 1967 war, with Jerusalem as its capital.

It would also be open to "any liberated Palestinian territory whose population wish to join it."

A Jordanian Government spokesman denied that the plan had an "a priori" agreement with Israel. He said there had been no discussions between the leaders of the two countries.

Binding the banks
The King told the gathering of about 500 people that his plan would organize the Jordanian-Palestinian "house" so as to give the country an international authority.

"This formula will bind the two banks with stronger ties," he said. "It does not involve anything which would change the nature of unity which has existed throughout the past 20 years."

The two banks were joined together after the creation of the state of Israel in 1948 and the first Arab war.

King Hussein said that his new formula was designed to help the Jordanian people to recover and defend their legitimate rights.

"That was the pledge we have made — to give the people their right to self-determination," he said. Hussein said the new formula had worked out in lengthy consultations with leaders and intellectuals on both banks, who had unanimously agreed that it embodied the features for a modern democratic state.

A representative of the Palestinian refugees told Hussein after the speech: "We refugees are with you, Hussein. We have no other leader."

King Hussein proposed that Amman would be the capital of both the Jordan region and the Kingdom. He would be the head of the state, wielding central executive authority assisted by a central cabinet of ministers.

Central legislative authority would also lie with the King and a council known as the national assembly. National assembly members would be elected by direct secret ballot in equal number for the two regions.

Central judicial authority would be held by a supreme court. The kingdom would have unified armed forces, whose supreme commander would be the King.

The kingdom would have a single international identity, represented by the central executive authority. This would ensure the kingdom's safety, stability and prosperity, the King said.

The executive authority in each of the two regions would be assumed by a governor-general from the region itself, and a regional cabinet of ministers, also drawn from the region.

Legislative authority in each region would be vested in a people's council, elected by direct secret ballot. These councils would elect regional governors-general.

Judicial authority within the region would be vested in the region's courts, which would be completely independent.

The King said the new stage on which Jordan intended to embark was based on liberation and responded to the wishes and aspirations of the people for unity.

In addition, it was based on complete insistence on the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people" and designed to lead them to the position where they could recover and safeguard those rights.

"That was the pledge we had made — to give the people their right to self-determination," the King said.

"It is our reply to all those who have chosen to cast doubt on that pledge and divert it of its content." Reviewing the history of the Jordanian state, Hussein said the unity between the two banks of the Jordan was formally proclaimed on April 21, 1950, after two historic conferences.

The first was convened in Jericho on December 1, 1948, and the second in Nabulus on December 23, 1948.

King Hussein added that those who held the two conferences — leaders of opinion of the West Bank and prominent personalities and leaders of Palestinian Arabs — had appealed to the late King Abdullah to take immediate steps for the unification of the two banks and their merger into one state under his leadership.

King Hussein said that planning for the new stage had come "as a direct result of a long series of continuous discussions and consultations with the representatives of the people and their leaders and intellectuals on the two banks."

For a better life
It had been unanimously agreed that the resultant principal formula for that stage had come to help make the new community where the new Jordan being would be the new force heading for progress, unity, freedom and a better life, the King said.

King Hussein paid tribute to the adherence of the people of the two banks to unity.

Referring to attempts to set up a Palestine state and differences on the Arab banks, he said continued division had prolonged the Israel occupation of the West Bank of Jordan and other Arab territory.

Another effect was deeper suffering for the Palestinian, who was driven into greater confusion — a state which had virtually spread among Arabs everywhere.

Although the situation had obstructed planning for the future, it had not deterred or shaken Jordan's faith in the inevitable victory of justice and an end to the nation's ordeal.

Hence the determination to lead the country to a new phase based on liberation, he said. (Reuter)

Israel refutes Soviet claims in U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (INA). — Israel's ambassador Jacob Doron Monday refuted the Soviet Ambassador's claim that there was freedom of religious observance for Jews in the Soviet Union, as for any body else. He also denied the validity of the ambassador's claim that there were 100 synagogues in the Soviet Union, but that Jews were not interested in attending religious services.

Mr. Doron, addressing the United Nations Human Rights Commission, said he agreed with the Soviet representative that the majority of Soviet Jews lived in the big cities.

"This is precisely the point," he said. "In Moscow — with half a million Jews — there is only one synagogue and two wooden shacks used for prayers. In Crakow with 80,000 Jews, there is no synagogue. In Lwow with 40,000 Jews, there is no synagogue."

In fact, hundreds of synagogues have been closed down over the last 10 years on orders of the Soviet authorities, Mr. Doron said, and not because there were no Jews who wanted to pray there. "They were closed down in spite of petitions to keep them open." He added that today, only 57 synagogues remain open in the whole of the Soviet Union.

It is common knowledge, he continued, that in all synagogues in the Soviet Union there prevails an atmosphere of fear and pathetic helplessness, stemming from the fact that congregations have been infiltrated by police-informers and that many of the congregational leaders have been coerced into subservience to the authorities and do as they are bid from above.

"What kind of religious freedom can there be when the printing of the fundamental holy book of Judaism — the Hebrew Bible — which happens, of course, also to be one of humanity's greatest cultural and moral monuments — is prohibited?" he asked.

"What kind of religious freedom can there be for Judaism when there are no schools where Jewish children can learn the language of the Bible?"

"What kind of religious freedom can there be for Judaism when there is no rabbinical seminary to train rabbis for the synagogues that still exist, and where not more than six or seven aged and mum sentences and many things which their severity could depend on how much of McGraw-Hill's money has been returned by them."

Irving writing hoax book to pay back McGraw-Hill

NEW YORK. — Author Clifford Irving, who faces a possible 13-year jail sentence in June, yesterday reported hard at work on a new book giving the inside story of how he carried out the Howard Hughes autobiography hoax.

He apparently hopes the proceeds will enable him to make restitution to McGraw-Hill, the publishing firm he duped out of more than $750,000 and that this will be taken into account when he comes up for sentencing in three months' time.

According to sources quoted by the "New York Post," the book deal is being handled by a firm of agents named Creative Management Associates. An executive of the firm referred all inquiries to Irving's lawyer, who declined comment.

Foreign Secretary due Tuesday U.K. strives for balance in M.E.

Eric SILVER'S LONDON Letter

FOR Britain, as for Israel, the important thing about Sir Alec Douglas-Home's official visit to Jerusalem next week is that it is happening. It demonstrates that Britain still has interests in the Middle East and that the Foreign Secretary is keen to preserve some degree of balance between Israel and the Arabs.

Sir Alec said on Tuesday that he was delighted to have the opportunity of visiting Israel. "I am particularly looking forward to my talks with Mr. Eban and to the meetings I shall have with the President, the Prime Minister and other members of the Government of Israel."

The visit comes at a time when Britain has at last rung down the curtain on 90 years of imperial presence and pretensions in the Middle East. Britain no longer exerts power there, and its present leaders have stopped regretting the change.

The Conservative Government's emphasis now is on domestic affairs, the civil strife in Northern Ireland, the step into Europe and the uncomfortable Rhodesian legacy.

Relations calm
Israel diplomats in London say that relations between the two countries are as calm as they have been at any time since the creation of the State 24 years ago. The tensions over the British refusal to sell Chieftain tanks to Israel have long since dispersed. The fitful press campaign against the supposed sale of two submarines to Israel is said to have left no trace on relations between the Embassy and the Foreign Office.

In the wider Middle East context, differences between the two countries are real and recognised. Britain continues to advocate a return with only minor adjustments to the pre-1967 borders. Sir Alec would like Israel to be more cooperative with Gunnar Jarring, U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 remains the cornerstone of British policy.

But there is no disposition by Sir Alec to take initiatives of his own or to transform U.S. initiatives into Anglo-American ones. Nor at this delicate stage do the British have any taste for a joint West European approach.

The British attitude towards American proposals for reopening the Suez Canal as a first step towards peace is one of general but not unconditional support. In the five years since the June war, Britain has learned to live without the Canal. Oil now comes around the Cape in giant tankers. And the British Conservatives are more sensitive than their Labour predecessors to the presence of Russian warships in the Mediterranean and the Indian Oceans. They have no particular desire to see the Canal open as a link between the two Soviet fleets.

Laying the ghost
In the perspective of Spring, 1972 Israel diplomats tend to see Sir Alec's Harrogate speech and his Cairo camel-riding through more softly-tinted spectacles than they did at the time. The Foreign Secretary was laying the ghost of Suez, mending Conservative fences with the Arab world and consciously striking a balanced posture.

More positively from the Israel angle Sir Alec is a pragmatic man. In the Churchill tradition he believes that jaw-jaw is better than war-war. If people have differences they should sit down and talk about them. He sees no virtue in the long-range exchange of messages once every three months.

The Foreign Secretary made the point in New York last autumn and again at a dinner during Abba Eban's visit to London in November. Israel officials, at the U.N. and in

Sir Alec Douglas-Home

London, have always found Sir Alec direct and informal, a Minister who knows their region and does not need to read from his brief. His concern, which he is expected to reiterate in Jerusalem next week, is with possibilities rather than with ethics.

He accepts as a fact of life that, for the moment, the Arabs will not talk, but he regrets it. Equally he will press his hosts to recognise that Arab pride will not allow them to surrender their territory.

Mart questions
No detailed programme is expected on the one substantial Anglo-Israel issue on next week's agenda. Talks continue at official level on the implications for Israel trade of Britain's entry to the European Common Market. Israel's cause for anxiety is acknowledged, but Britain's firm position is that it cannot negotiate special terms for Israel as it did, say, for New Zealand. Nor will the British adopt a separate stand from their prospective partners towards third parties.

Once in, however, their weight will be thrown behind an outward-looking community. Britain appreciates the value of Israel trade (Israel spends £17m. a year on British goods). The Trade Ministry here, supported by ministerial flag-bearers, has been trying recently to expand that trade. The pound is now much stronger than it was three years ago so that the British government is less susceptible to Arab threats to cut off trade or to withdraw sterling from London.

In the Supreme Court
Before Justices Landau, Berinson and Cohn.

LAW REPORT
The Jerusalem Post
Edited by Doris Lankin

Yahli Kahanov, Appellant, v. Chamber of Advocates, Respondent (C.A.A. 1/72).

THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1972

Chamber of Advocates entitled to postpone entry of accused candidate

The Supreme Court dismissed an appeal against a decision of the Chamber of Advocates.

The appellant applied to be admitted to the Chamber of Advocates on the strength of section 42 of the Chamber of Advocates Law which provides that: "A person qualified to be an advocate, who is resident in Israel and has attained the age of 23 years, shall become an advocate upon his admission as a member of the Chamber."

The Central Board of the Chamber decided to postpone consideration of their reply to his application until such time as the evidence had been heard in a criminal case pending against him, relying for this decision on section 44 of the Chamber of Advocates Law which provides, inter alia, that: "The Chamber may, after giving the candidate an opportunity to plead his case before it, refuse to admit him as a member notwithstanding that he is qualified—(1) if he has been convicted of an offence which, in the circumstances of the case, involves ignominy and the Chamber considers that in view of that conviction he is not fit to be an advocate; (2) if other facts have come to light—whether by the judgment of a Court of Discipline or by opposition lodged under section 43 or in any other manner—in view of which the Chamber considers that the candidate is not fit to be an advocate."

In the appeal to the Supreme Court against this decision, Mr. D. Avi-Yitshak appeared for the appellant and Mr. M. Eliaash for the respondent.

Judgment

Justice Cohn, who delivered the reasoned judgment of the Supreme Court, first remarked, in parenthesis, that the time limit fixed by the Central Board for reconsidering the appellant's application (that is, after the evidence in the criminal case pending against him had been heard) appeared to him to be strange in the extreme, as he could not imagine that the Central Board would presume to usurp the judicial functions of a court and decide the case for itself on the basis of the evidence submitted. He preferred, therefore, he in finding the answer to this question to be in the affirmative, Justice Cohn noted that there was nothing in the Law which made it incumbent upon the Central Board to decide immediately, upon receiving his application for membership, whether to admit a candidate to the Chamber of Advocates or not. On the contrary the Law allows for objections to be lodged against the admission of applicants within a certain time, and only after the lapse of this period will the Central Board of the Chamber start considering the application; and a pending criminal charge against a candidate was, in his opinion, analogous with an objection to his admission to the Chamber. Ignoring a pending criminal charge, continued Justice Cohn, might frustrate the legislator's aim of precluding the admission to the Chamber of a person found guilty of a criminal offence in which there is an element of ignominy. So that while such a pending charge cannot serve to disqualify the candidate from admission to the Chamber, it certainly justifies delaying the decision as to whether to admit him or not, unless the nature of the charge is such that it is irrelevant whether the candidate is convicted or acquitted (which was apparently not so in the present case.)

In conclusion, Justice Cohn considered the question of whether there had in fact been a right of appeal against the Central Board's decision to postpone consideration of its reply to the appellant's application, holding that section 45 of the Chamber of Advocates Law vests a right of appeal to the Supreme Court in anyone whom the Chamber (that is the Central Board) refuses to admit as a member—and this includes a temporary refusal until further considerations (see also C.A.A. 2/64, 1 P.D. 19/180).

Appeal dismissed.
Reasoned judgment given on March 5, 1972.

A NON-religious man who lives in the generally very religious Tel Aviv suburb of Bnei Berak wants to know why the use of a bicycle is forbidden on the Sabbath while it is perfectly acceptable to push a child in a pram. If a wheel came off the pram, for instance—and it clearly would be forbidden to repair the vehicle on a Sabbath—would it be permissible to sit its occupant on the seat of the bicycle and push him to grandmother's for lunch that way?

We consulted several knowledgeable persons on an answer to this conundrum. First of all, the pram may be used because in Israel there is an eruv, a boundary wire, around every Jewish town or place of settlement. This renders it enclosed for the purposes of the law, and permits the resident to do everything he may do in his house on a Sabbath, such as carry things. The pram is not travelling, it is just being shifted around.

A bicycle, on the other hand is considered in some ways the equivalent of a horse, and a horse may not be ridden on the Sabbath, one important reason being the danger street. One of them said "Stop a minute," and with a bit of puffing and groaning bent down to pick up a one-agora coin he had spied on the pavement. The other one asked him if he was crazy. "All that for a grusha?"

"Consider," the other replied, "it would be I.L.L.00 before tax."

that if your horse passed under a tree, you would be liable to break off a branch, which is forbidden on the Sabbath.

MEIR Yaari, the veteran Mafam leader, recently recalled a stage in Women's Lib that dates back to about 1923, when the houses in and near Sderot Rothschild in Tel Aviv were being built. There was a certain small proportion of women in the building labour field then, and as usual they got the worst jobs. But there was one complete building crew made up of girl pioneers and led by the redoubtable Ada Maimon, with a view to a chance at the good jobs as well as the bad. Mr. Yaari recalled that he had been working nearby, on Rehov Bograchov, but if a man went near the women's building, he was unceremoniously chased off. He was talking about his new book "In the Struggle for Liberated Labour," which has just been published.

A SABRA who spent a number of years in the U.S. studying operations research tells a story that we believe is the key to many unexplained difficulties. He was investigating some bottle-necks in the telephone system and after a study set up a nice little model for the elusive "14," which you dial when the person you wish to speak to is not listed in the telephone book, or his number has been changed; or when you are phoning from a public call box and the book has been stolen or shredded up. Or, it seems, if you wish to know the exact hour at which the Sabbath or a holiday starts or ends that week. The point is that "14" is always engaged. It is so hard to get that people commonly ring up some other number they know instead, ask the people there to look up the wanted number for them, and so have to pay for two calls. Our friend presented his solution of how the calls should be channelled to the operators to save time. The engineer in charge was quite enthusiastic.

"This is not an American company whose one idea is to please the public. I'm not sure we can afford to improve the service. If it were better, we should immediately get far more calls, we should need more operators, and there is no budget for that." But there will probably be some improvement nevertheless.

GOVERNOR Moshe Sarbar of the Bank of Israel was host at the Bank to the leaders of the American Israeli Numismatic Association, an organization of several thousands collectors of Israel's coins. About a hundred of their members are on a tour here, and their officers, headed by Mr. Morris Bram of New York, president of the Association, called upon the Governor.

The numismatists were anxious to persuade the Governor to issue

MISUNDERSTANDING

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir,— Your editorial on the African states as written by the African point of view and seems bent on promoting misunderstanding between the peoples of Israel and Africa.

Time and again the people of Africa have been given the impression that we are so poor that we are afraid to be extremely independent in our policies; as we have been told to lose the few million dollars that Israel or Libya are willing to do not buy our votes nor do deprive us of our independence. We formulate our own national policies according to our national interests.

7. As customary in Israel, the Bank has guaranteed to members of two Provident Funds and a Severance Pay Fund (limited companies) managed by it, the repayment of the deposits—principal only—on their respective maturity dates. At balance sheet date the assets of these funds, which include accrued interest and other income thereon, are mostly invested in debentures and their value exceeds the amount guaranteed by the Bank.

8. Final income-tax assessments were received up to and including the tax year 1969 (the year ended 31st December, 1969). No provision for taxation was made in the financial year owing to previous years' losses deductible for income-tax purposes.

2. The Bank was given by a third party an absolute and irrevocable undertaking to place at its disposal proceeds of the debentures which will be sufficient to cover doubtful or bad debts within a period ending not later than 1988, provided that such income will be transferred directly to cover the said debts. Therefore, no provision is made for these debts, and the income, as aforesaid, was transferred directly to cover the debts accordingly.

3. On 22nd August, 1971 the rate of exchange of the Israeli Pound to the U.S. Dollar was changed to $1.00 = IL2.20. # Officer gets cold welcome from Hebron settlers

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The senior officer appointed to take over the affairs of Kiryat Arba, the Jewish township outside Hebron, received a cold welcome from the settlers when he arrived there yesterday to take up his duties. The settlers, led by Rabbi Moshe Levinger, the Chairman of their Election Council, explained to the officer that they saw no need for him, since their Council had been managing the affairs of Kiryat Arba quite well till now, and could continue doing so in the future.

Rabbi Levinger told the "Dim" news agency that the settlers would not cooperate with the officer. Speaking later to The Jerusalem Post, he said he did not know yet what form this non-cooperation would take. Nor did he yet know to what extent the officer would "interfere" in the affairs of the township.

The Council, Rabbi Levinger said, had been collecting taxes, dealing with the Housing Ministry and the various public and private concerns investing in Kiryat Arba, and running the health, education and transport services.

The officer's name has not yet been made public.

Meanwhile, the Minister for Religious Affairs, Dr. Zerah Warhaftig, decided yesterday to appoint a Religious Council for Kiryat Arba. The Chairman of the Religious Council will be Rabbi Levinger.

N.Y. cops here for March

Jerusalem Post Reporter
A contingent of New York City policemen and women arrived yesterday at Lod Airport to take part in next week's Three Day March. They will be among 1300 foreign participants.

More than 800 young volunteers from abroad will also participate. The volunteers under the auspices of the World Zionist Organization will host a giant kametz for Israeli participants at the marchers' camp at Beit-El Monday night.

The Jerusalem Municipality will this week begin decorating Jaffa Road with flags and emblems in preparation for the parade which will conclude the event on Wednesday.

A group of soldiers training for the march yesterday discovered a man's body on the Beit Oren-Ahli road. The body carried no identification and police investigators believe the man may have been murdered. (Hes)

JERUSALEM OMBUDSMAN REPORT: City Engineer's Dep't ignores complaints from the public

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
Jerusalem Post Reporter
The City Engineer's Department has been charged by the Jerusalem Ombudsman with administrative failures and with ignoring complaints from the public.

The Department was the glaring exception in a generally improving picture drawn by the Ombudsman, Shlomo Kadar, in his annual report released this week. "In general, the increasing consciousness within municipal departments regarding inquiries from the public continues," Mr. Kadar wrote. ("But) the ignoring of complaints from the public by the City Engineer's Department must be pointed out."

Mr. Kadar notes that the Engineer's Department was the subject of the largest number of complaints of any municipal department — 316, of which 190 were found by the Ombudsman to be justified. (The second largest number of complaints concerned the City Beautification Department with 219 complaints, of which 137 were found to be justified.)

Within the Engineer's Department, the Building Inspection Branch was the subject of 118 complaints, 65 justified. The Roads Branch got 99 complaints, 65 justified. The Inspectors, Mr. Kadar said, sometimes displayed helplessness regarding violations by building contractors.

The Department does not have sufficient manpower, in quantity and quality, to cope with the increased amount of work it has to handle.

Mr. Kadar said he expressed the hope that the Department's reorganization, which follows a study by a special municipal committee, will improve its operation. Mr. Kadar singled out the sanitation service for special praise, noting that an average of less than one justified complaint per month had been received per month. He pointed out that the City Beautification Department, within whose province sanitation lies, has appointed a woman to deal exclusively with inquiries from the public.

The Ombudsman received a total of 1,081 complaints during the period covered by the report — April, 1970-December, 1971. The monthly average was 51 complaints, which 28 were found to be justified. Mr. Kadar noted that, contrary to previous years, the public now generally turns to the Ombudsman only with reasonable complaints.

Complaints from Arab residents were less than 10 per cent of the total. Mr. Kadar noted that Arab residents generally dealt with the special office in charge of East Jerusalem affairs.

Mr. Kadar found that the number of complaints requiring his intervention were not so great as to arouse concern about the level of services in a large municipality employing 5,000 persons.

The report indicates the diligence with which the Ombudsman pursues each case through layers of bureaucracy. He sometimes accepted complaints outside his normal province, such as the plea by a man who had been barked at on his way to the Western Wall by a watchdog outside the home of Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Alon in the Old City. "Who can close his ears to the cry of a God-fearing Jew wending his way at dawn to worship his Creator at the remains of our Holy Temple, and who finds himself prevented from doing so by fear of a barking dog?" Mr. Kadar wrote in his report.

The Ombudsman located the man in charge of the dog and determined that it was about to be sent away for a training course that would teach it whom to bark at.

Building parts factory for 'Kiryat Arba'

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter
Plans are underway for the establishment of a polyester building component manufacturing plant at the Jewish settlement of Kiryat Arba in Hebron. The plant, which has been sanctioned by the Investment Centre, will cost IL800,000, and will be financed by local and European industrialists.

The plant, expected to employ 200 workers, will manufacture polyester parts to be used in construction work. In the initial stages, production is expected to be worth around IL800,000. After the first year the plant is expected to reach sales totalling IL1.5m.

Two separate production lines are planned, capable of turning out 5,000 items per shift. A recent market survey shows that there will be little difficulty in selling the components in Israel and abroad.

A large proportion of production will be earmarked for export.

Thus far at least half a dozen similar projects have received the approval of the Investment Centre, and several Israeli-financed construction component plants are already operating here.

Other investments approved by the Investment Centre last week include a IL.5m. metal-plating plant to be financed by local entrepreneurs in Upper Nazareth, and a ILm. jewellery manufacturing enterprise in either Lod or Ramle. The jewellery factory, which will provide employment for 20 workers, will be financed by foreign investors and local businessmen. Two-thirds of the production, expected to be in the region of IL2.5m., will be exported to the U.S. and Europe.

Head of home for retarded cleared of manslaughter

HAIFA — The District Court here on Monday reversed the manslaughter conviction against the director of a Hadera home for retarded children. He had been held responsible for the death of one his charges at an unguarded beach, but the appeal court found it had not been proved that the victim had died by drowning.

The Hadera magistrate court had imposed a IL2,500 fine and nine-month suspended sentence on 42-year-old Avraham Eckstein, director of the Netua Home for Retarded Children.

Hadera Magistrate Malchiel Slutski had found Eckstein guilty of negligence in the death of Saruch Haddad, a Netua inmate, during a bathing party at a Hadera beach. No lifeguard was stationed at the beach, and bathing was prohibited.

While bathing, six of the children were suddenly swept out to sea. Eckstein and one of the staff members plunged into the water and pulled the six out. One of them, young Haddad, was already dead.

The Netua director's original conviction came after an autopsy established the cause of death as drowning. In the appeal, however, chief pathologist B. Gall of Haifa's Rambam hospital, testified that the test used was out of date and that the body had deteriorated too much by the time of the autopsy for the exact cause of death to be determined.

As Dr. Gall had found that drowning could not be proven, the bench of Judges Slonim, Friedman and Fortuna set aside the conviction.

Opposition to T.A. industry

TEL AVIV — Residents of south Tel Aviv are organizing a committee to oppose municipal plans for a new industrial park on some 850 dunams near the Ezra Quarter.

The committee is headed by General Knesset Member and Eastliver Quarter resident, Meshulam Yacobi, who claims that the new zone would mean pollution and noise for the residents of the area.

Mr. Yacobi told The Jerusalem Post that the land would be much better used for parks and entertainment areas. Committee members claim that the Ministry of the Interior also opposes the city's plans, on the grounds that a large industrial centre ought not to be decided on strictly on the basis of one city's needs, but should take the entire metropolitan area's interests into consideration.

The city, for its part, maintains that small industry in town is limited by lack of space; and, as a result, many plants are being run-down in districts, polluting the appearance of many of the older commercial sections of South Tel Aviv. This contributes to pollution there and makes life difficult for those residents.

The area designated for the centre is at present registered as agricultural land. The committee members say it should serve as a green belt between the residential quarters of Tel Aviv, Ramat Gan and Holon.

Five arrests in Black Panther milk raid

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Five people who took part in the Black Panther milk raid on Rehavia early Tuesday morning were arrested by Jerusalem police and charged with theft. The Panthers took 20 crates of milk from the prosperous quarter and redistributed them in the "Asbestonim" of Kiryat Yovel, one of Jerusalem's poorest districts.

Police spokesman Avraham Turge-man told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that one of the arrested was a taxi driver and another was "not oriental." (Asked if one of the detainees was a member of Matspen, the extreme-left splinter group, Mr. Turge-man answered in the affirmative.)

Among those arrested yesterday were Sa'adia Marciano, Charlie Eilon, Haim Turge-man and Haim Dagan.

Air traffic at Herzliya port ordered cut down

The High Court of Justice yesterday made absolute an order which issued more than a year ago against the Civil Aviation Authority at the request of Kir Shmaryahu residents. The applicants asked the High Court to order the restriction of airplane traffic at the airport bordering on Kir Shmaryahu, both in direction of flight and in volume.

The order was absolute after the court heard opinions from three experts from the Israel Aircraft Industries, who were appointed to study the applicants' complaints. The experts confirmed the claim made by the residents, that the noise made by the large volume of plane traffic above their roofs is unusually great.

The court rejected the C.A.A. argument that the noise is part of the blessings of modern technology, and ordered that no flights are to take off or land over Kir Shmaryahu (Aviv-Hatza railroad tracks) and that flights during certain hours, and on the eve of Sabbaths and holidays, be drastically reduced. # Old Jaffa Old Jaffa will get a IL750,000 handicrafts centre — to be set up by a group of investors from London and local handicraft experts. Some 15 workers will be employed. Initially, production will be IL600,000, rising to over IL1m. after the first year.

The largest single investment approved by the Investment Centre last week includes a IL.5m. metal-plating plant to be financed by local entrepreneurs in Upper Nazareth, and a ILm. jewellery manufacturing enterprise in either Lod or Ramle. The jewellery factory, which will provide employment for 20 workers, will be financed by foreign investors and local businessmen. Two-thirds of the production, expected to be in the region of IL2.5m., will be exported to the U.S. and Europe.

Two Jerusalem cabbies robbed near Hebron

Two taxi drivers, one from Bethlehem and the other from Jerusalem, were robbed in separate incidents on Tuesday.

Two men hired Tewfik Hase, 55, of Bethlehem, to drive them from Bethlehem to the village of Abadya, near Hebron. Near the village the two men invited the driver to have a drink with them. When he refused, one passenger offered him a IL100 note and asked for change, and the other passenger stabbed him from behind, injuring him slightly. The men took IL190 from him.

A little later, cabbie Mohammed Ali, 46, was hired by two men to drive from Herod's Gate to the same village. Under threat with a pistol, he was robbed of IL150.

Police in Bethlehem, where the complaints were made, are looking for the holdup men with the aid of a tracker. (Hes)

Harsh penalties from today for traffic offences

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter
Harsher penalties for traffic offences, drawn up by the Ministry of Transport for three months ago, will go into force today.

A minimum sentence of three months suspension of their driving licences will be imposed by the courts on those who run red lights, fail to yield right of way, overtake where passing is forbidden, or drive without a valid licence.

Drivers who are involved more than once in an accident where someone is injured will be faced with a minimum penalty of one year's loss of their driver's licence.

A series of stiffer penalties will also be introduced for other traffic offences.

Fined for rowdiness in movie theatre

TEL AVIV — A 16-year-old youth from Be'er Sheva was fined IL200 and given a three-month suspended sentence yesterday for disorderly conduct in a movie theatre.

Judge Boris Rappoport, handing down the sentence, said it was "high time movie-goers were able to enjoy a movie quietly, without being exposed to rowdy acts." He noted that only the youth's age and clean record saved him from going to prison.

The youth was arrested in February for making noise, singing and resting his feet on the chairs at the Ramat Yosef theatre in Bat Yam. (Hes)

Seen ready to run for Chief Rabbi

Unterman: Honorary post empty of practical meaning

By DAVID LANDAU
Jerusalem Post Reporter
Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi Isser Yehuda Unterman yesterday told the chairman of the Knesset Interior Committee, Mr. Mordechai Surkis, that he considers the office of "Honorary President of the Chief Rabbinate Council" empty of all practical meaning. The new Chief Rabbinate Election Law offers the office of Honorary President to a retiring Chief Rabbi — a clause which was introduced to induce Rabbi Unterman not to run for the top post again.

Rabbi Unterman did not say outright he would refuse to accept the office, but he said his acceptance was "very doubtful."

Observers believe that Rabbi Unterman's rejection of the office of Honorary President will be followed by an announcement that he will stand for re-election. (The law offers the office of Honorary President only to a former chief rabbi who does not stand for re-election.)

It is understood that Rabbi Unterman feels particularly slighted by the provision in the law which stipulates that the Honorary President may only attend Council meetings if invited by both Chief Rabbis. (If Sephardi Chief Rabbi Yitzhak Nissim and Tel Aviv Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren are in the top rabbinical posts — as the Government hopes — Rabbi Unterman's attendance at Council meetings would be infrequent indeed, since relations between him and Rabbi Nissim are strained.)

Rabbi Unterman is under pressure from rabbis and dayanim to stand for Chief Rabbi again — mainly in order to keep Rabbi Goren out (Rabbi Goren is considered too innovative in right-wing religious circles). It is believed that if Rabbi Unterman does eventually decide to stand again, Rabbi Goren will withdraw from the race.

The same right-wing elements who are pressing Rabbi Unterman to run are also trying to persuade Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, Sephardi Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv, to stand against Rabbi Nissim. Latest word from knowledgeable sources is that Rabbi Yosef is likely to agree to run.

Market up in lively session

NEW YORK — The market was higher in active trading yesterday. The Dow Jones Industrial Average was up over three points after being ahead more than six points the previous day.

Analysts say that the market could now be gathering strength for a move to set a new high. They add, however, there might be some further resistance at around 950 on the D.J.I.A.

Analysts also say that short-term money rates continue to climb, and some banks are expected to raise the prime rates to match the prevailing 4% per cent.

The number of shares traded amounted to 19,460,000, as advancing issues led declining ones 761 to 691. The D.J.I.A. was up 6.31 points and closed at 937.31.

Thirty-four persons known to have been buried on the Mount were unaccounted for, and remains were found which were not identified with particular graves. These remains are now buried together in the communal grave. Among the 34 was Miss Henrietta Szold, the Hadassah leader. Rabbi Dov Shahor is pictured at left. (Rabbanim Yehoshua)

Army probe ends of Gaza Strip Beduin protests

By ZEEV SCHUL
Jerusalem Post Military Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The army has concluded investigations into complaints by Beduin in the Rafah area, against the fencing off of settlement areas facing the southern part of the Gaza Strip. (The Defence Ministry last night denied it had carried out a parallel probe.)

The conclusions are not being released for publication, for the time being. It is understood, however, that a few dozen Beduin families, who were permanent residents of the area, were given financial compensation. The Beduin were supported in their complaints by the concerted protests of Hashomer Hatzair kibbutzim in the Negev. Investigation of the complaints began early in February, and the material gathered was passed on to the army's Judge Advocate-General for an opinion.

It is understood that the fencing of certain areas was carried out while the area was still under the jurisdiction of the Southern Command. The Strip has since been transferred to the Central Command.

Meanwhile, Mapam has swung its full support behind the agitation of its left-wing against Jewish settlement in the administered territories in general, and in the Gaza Strip in particular.

Jailed for Fatah activity

GAZA. — A 22-year-old Gaza resident was sentenced in a military court here to 15 years in prison, after being found guilty of armed infiltration from Jordan and organizing Fatah squads in the Gaza Strip.

Said Abu-Hussa admitted the charges, according to which he was recruited to the Fatah in 1968, while in Jordan, and was returned here in 1970, armed with a pistol and a Kalashnikov sub-machinegun. Abu-Hussa recruited others into the Fatah ranks, and served as treasurer of the terrorist organization in the Deir el-Balah area. He was caught in November, 1970, in a citrus grove. (Tim)

Farmers had very profitable year in 1970/71, Gvati tells Knesset

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter
Israel's farmers have it better all the time. Agriculture Minister Iam Gvati told the Knesset yesterday, in his annual review of the work of his Ministry, that the last year — 1970/71 — was one of the most profitable since the state was founded. Agricultural production rose considerably, and did agricultural income; making up for the dip of the year before.

The value of production last year — IL2.5m. at current prices, a 26.8 per cent; the prices of 1 products rose by 14.5 per cent, said the Minister. The branches which increased their production most were citrus and table poultry.

Minister noted that prices of products rose roughly by the same proportion as other products; however, export prices went up much more.

Last year, he said, agriculture accounted for a bigger share of the Gross National Product, and farmers' incomes rose as high as 95 per cent of the average income in other parts of the economy. However, he noted, farmers usually have to work harder than workers in other sectors of the economy. The farmers earned more, he said, because of more profitable exports, higher productivity, and more advantageous ratio between cost of input and value of output. "Let's hope this trend continues," he noted.

Giving the House facts on exports, Mr. Gvati said that fresh produce went up 25 per cent between 1969/70 and 1970/71 (from $125m. to $157m.), with citrus taking the lion's share (from $89m. to $117m.). The groves produced more, and got higher prices, mainly because of frost damage in Spain.

This year, he said, even though more fruit has been grown, it is fetching lower prices; so citrus exports should only bring in the same amount as last year. Total fresh

Shubinsky freed on huge bond

HAIFA. — Former Autocars manager Yitzhak Shubinsky was released on IL250,000 bond by a Magistrate's Court here yesterday after appearing to hear a police representative accuse him of misappropriating company funds in violation of paragraph 276 of the Criminal Code Ordinance of 1938.

Chief Magistrate Miriam Starkman-Verlinsky also directed that Mr. Shubinsky deposit an additional IL350,000 in security if he wishes to leave the country.

Mr. Ezra Hadrot, of National Police Headquarters, said Mr. Shubinsky is accused of misappropriating approximately $150,000 from Autocars in December 1970, and transferring that sum to his private bank account in Britain without a permit from the Finance Ministry.

Mr. Hadrot told Judge Starkman-Verlinsky the police had no objection to Mr. Shubinsky being released on bond, if it is sufficient, nor to his being permitted to travel abroad.

Leaving the courthouse, Mr. Shubinsky told reporters the accusations raised against him were unfounded, and "I will eventually be dropped." He said "Never in my life have I been indicted. I have voluntarily surrendered my passport to the police, and to this date no criminal act has been found to incriminate me... people are just persecuting me."

Mr. Shubinsky had not been arrested, but had come to court with his lawyers to complete a formal procedure. The court appearance was arranged with the police.

The police inquiry was sparked by an allegation raised at the Knesset Economic Committee by Mr. Shmuel Tamir, M.K., that Mr. Shubinsky maintained a private bank account, under the name of "I.S. Leyland," in Britain.

If at first you don't succeed...

TIBERIAS. — A 23-year-old Tiberias man walked into the police station here yesterday and asked to be arrested.

When the constable on duty refused to comply with his request, the young man started shouting. When that did not help, he began to take his clothes off. Still ignored, he hit the constable in the face. At that point he was finally arrested on the charge of assaulting a constable.

It could not be ascertained yesterday why the man was so eager to be locked up.

Twenty-one American tourists were injured, one of them seriously, when their tour bus overturned on the Ramallah-Nabulus road, three kilometers from Nabulus. Several taxis passing by aided in transferring the injured to the Government Hospital in Nabulus, and to the clinic in a nearby army base. (Rubinger photo)

Labour Party leaders not involved in 'Davar' row

By MARK SEGAL
Jerusalem Post Political Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Labour Party leadership has so far not been asked to intervene in the pressure campaign against "Davar" (the Histadrut daily) editorial board by Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, it was learned here yesterday.

Informed sources denied reports that Premier Golda Meir and other Labour Party leaders have been asked to intervene. This followed the recent angry exchange between Mr. Ben-Aharon and top "Davar" executives. The Histadrut chief called in "Davar" editor Hana Zemer, deputy editor David Fedahzur, editorial board secretary Elliyahu Agress and "Davar" general manager Gideon Ne'eman. Mr. Ben-Aharon took particular exception to three items in the paper — an editorial on the bakers' dispute, which he held did not jibe with the Histadrut line; a critical article on Ashdod stevedore boss Yehoshua Peretz, in "Davar's" weekly magazine; and a funny Purim cartoon series about the rash of strikes.

REPLACE YOU ALL
Informed sources said Mr. Ben-Aharon warned: "I would like to replace all of you. If I had a majority, I would do so." Mrs. Zemer was reported to have acted with great restraint in the face of Mr. Ben-Aharon's rage, and sought to explain to him that the function of "Davar" was to reflect the entire range of opinion within the Labour Party.

The "Davar" matter became public after Mr. Ben-Aharon sent a letter to all members of the Histadrut Central Committee, in which he complained about the paper. He complained that "the editorial on the bakers' strike was not checked first with the Bakers' Union and invites Government intervention in a recognized labour dispute."

Histadrut share in economy decreasing

By BRAYA SHAPIRO
Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The role of Histadrut-controlled enterprises in Israel's economic development is declining, according to a survey published yesterday by the Labour Federation's Institute for Economic and Social Research. The survey covered the period of 1966 to 1971.

In 1966, the study showed, the Histadrut companies were responsible for 21.4 per cent of the net domestic product. By 1970, its share was down to 18.9 per cent.

However, this trend was not uniform. In agriculture, Histadrut enterprises supplied 72 per cent of the nation's total during 1970, an increase of 0.7 per cent over the 1966 figure.

The comparative figures showed almost no change in the field of banking. In industry, however, the downward trend was pronounced — 19.5 per cent to 16.4 per cent. In construction, the Histadrut's share fell from 28.9 per cent to 22.4 per cent, and in transport, from 24.5 per cent to 20.3 per cent.

Ze'evi meets Gaza officials

GAZA. — Aluf Rehavam Ze'evi, O/C Central Command, appealed yesterday to all wanted terrorists in the Strip to give themselves up, and promised they would be treated fairly.

Aluf Ze'evi, to whom the authority over the Gaza Strip was transferred from the Southern Command two weeks ago, told local officials in his first meeting with them that he was anxious to ensure calm in the area, and that this would be "the best way of achieving it."

The officials, led by Mayor Haj Rashad Shawa, put a series of requests to Aluf Ze'evi, aimed at reducing the military authorities' actions in the Strip and at providing local government with more authority. Aluf Ze'evi promised to give quick attention to the requests, and to reply as soon as he consults with other Israeli officials responsible for the Strip.

A CIVIL DEFENCE and emergency drill will be held at Lod Airport tomorrow morning. The various emergency services at the terminal will participate in the 90-minute exercise.

REACTIONS

By stressing the promise of autonomy, the Hussein statement, especially its timing, appears to have had an impact on the coming West Bank municipal elections where candidates now seem more at ease about participating.

Former Jordanian Defence Minister, Anwar Nusseibeh, yesterday noted that the Jordanian King had often mentioned the right of the local population to self-determination. Mr. Nusseibeh, who lives in Jerusalem, thought Hussein was deferring in clearer terms the future of the Palestinians.

The former Jordanian diplomat nevertheless expressed the opinion that the whole plan was irrelevant since the first step "should be Israel's withdrawal from occupied territories," following which the local population, he added, should be allowed to determine its own future.

The Hebron mayor, Sheikh Mohammed Ali Ja'abari, said the whole matter was primarily dependent on Israel, which controls the territories Hussein mentioned as part of his federation. Quoting an Arab proverb, the Sheikh said the Jordanian King was "selling fish in the sea," stressing that it was also up to the local population to decide whether to accept or reject the plan.

Mr. Aziz Shehadeh, a Ramallah lawyer known as a staunch advocate of a Palestinian entity, said the Hussein statement was "worth studying."

Our BeerSheva reporter Herbert Ben Adé added:

Haj Rashad el-Shawa, mayor of Gaza, reacted favourably yesterday to the Hussein announcement. Stating that he was expressing a private opinion, the mayor said it would be in the Gaza Strip's interest to be included as a federal state in a United Arab Kingdom as suggested by Hussein. This, he said, would insure that the strip would not be annexed by Israel.

Tel Aviv man jailed for giving military data

HAIFA. — A Tel Aviv man who denounced the State of Israel over the "Voice of Cairo" and "Voice of Damascus" radio stations was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment in the District Court yesterday.

Yitzhak Rubinstein, 21, was found guilty of passing secret information to Lebanese intelligence services and illegally leaving Israel. He admitted the charges.

Rubinstein, who entered Lebanon in March 1971, told the court he was tortured and beaten there during his interrogation. The court convicted him of passing on data concerning various army installations, air fields and a pilot training school. (Tim)

Israeli Arabs jailed for terrorism

LYDDA. — The military court here yesterday sentenced three Israeli Arabs to jail terms for membership in an illegal organization, training for terrorist activity and illegal possession of arms and sabotage materials.

Sa'id Hassan Issa, 32, Hailil Ali Ibrahim Kyss, 38, and Abdel-Rahman Zouri, 30, were sentenced to 15, 12 and 10 years, respectively. They are all residents of Nahaf village in the Galilee.

NAZI VICTIMS PROTEST ACQUITTALS

TEL AVIV. — A strong protest at the acquittal of Walter Dejaco and Fritz Ertl, the two Nazi criminals who shot the Auschwitz gas chamber was called to Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky yesterday by the leaders of the World Federation of Jewish Resistance Fighters and Ghetto and concentration Camp Survivors.

Arrangements for direct mayoral vote

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter
When mayors are directly elected, after the present law is changed, the winning candidate will be the one getting the largest number of votes beyond a 40 per cent minimum.

This was decided in the Knesset's Law, Constitution and Justice Committee yesterday, during preparation of the bill for the second reading. The point was passed by a vote of 10 to eight. If no candidate gets 40 per cent, the local council will choose between the two candidates who received the highest number of votes.

Strip and the West Bank together," the Mayor said. "The Gaza Strip can play a big role in developing the suggested kingdom, being located on the Mediterranean Sea, which would mean that Gaza would become the main seaport to connect the proposed Kingdom with the world," he added.

The Mayor again stressed that this was his personal opinion, and that the decision would have to be taken by the Strip's inhabitants, by referendum, without external pressures.

Reminded that Israel would lie between the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the mayor said: "The means of connecting the Gaza Strip with the West Bank should be agreed upon with Israel, through a U.N. mediator."

Our correspondent Jack Mauries in Paris reports the influential French newspaper "Le Monde" said yesterday, "although it is unlikely that the 'Hussein plan' will have immediate effects, it helps to clear ground which has been plentifully encumbered with obstacles. There is every reason to regard it as a gesture of appeasement."

"Le Figaro" commented "the success secured by the Israeli authorities in organizing the municipal elections which are due to take place in Cisjordan at the beginning of April, have forced Hussein to take the initiative in order to avoid further erosion of its prestige among the Cisjordanians."

Some price cuts seen for Pessah shoppers

By DAVID LENNON
Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter
In an effort to offset the traditional rise in prices before Pessah, the Commissioner of Prices, Dr. Moshe Mandelbaum, has issued a call to producers and retailers to reduce their prices for the holiday. Pessah starts Wednesday night, March 29.

One result of this action was the announcement by the Citrus Marketing Board that oranges would be sold at 45 to 50 agorot per kilo instead of the 70-agorot price current on the market. (The Board took this action partly because it is having difficulties setting all the oranges picked this year. It hopes that this price reduction will lead to increased local sales.)

A number of food producers have also announced that they will cut their prices for the holiday.

MEIR REJECTION

activity in connection with municipal elections in Judea and Samaria.

One motive for the dramatic announcement of the plan could have been to distract attention from cooperation in the West Bank with the Israeli authorities, with the elections the latest and most striking example. The publicity build-up preceding the speech was aimed at securing maximum impact.

Observers said it remains to be seen how far Hussein's move will succeed in arresting the deterioration in his relations with the Palestinians. There is no doubt in Jerusalem that it will, for some time at least, be a new dimension in the debate around the Palestinian question, in addition to the Israeli and Fatah "secular" state options.

Mrs. Meir's Knesset statement today may take the form of a Government reply to seven urgent motions for the agenda on Hussein's speech. Another possible procedure would be for the Premier to make a Government statement, which would be followed by a debate, supplanting the motions.

The Knesset House Committee is to meet at 10 a.m. today to decide on procedure. The motions for the agenda came from Gahal, the Eretz Centre, Poale Aguda, New Communists, Ha'olam Hazeh, and two independents, Mr. Shalom Cohen and Dr. Meir Avizohar.

LACK OF REALISM

MRS. Meir in the Knesset yesterday dwelt in strong terms on the curious fact that King Hussein's plan for a federated Jordan failed to refer to what the "Daily Telegraph" in London called the "little matter" of Israeli control of the West Bank. It is, of course, precisely this failure that makes Hussein's proposal so ambiguous and academic, eliciting in turn such a wide range of reactions around the world.

Yet it is perhaps no less curious that Hussein appears to have failed to gauge correctly the likely response of the other party most directly involved, namely the inhabitants of the West Bank. Since 1967 this population has become increasingly aware of its relative independence from the regime in Amman. This process has resulted not merely from the fact of Israeli control, but also from the economic and political developments that have accompanied this fact.

As a result, just as Mrs. Meir expressed indignation at Hussein's failure to take Israel into accounts, so in the West Bank there is a general sense that Hussein can no longer unilaterally seek to prescribe the future for them.

There are of course younger and more radical elements in the West Bank who reject the very idea of any link with Jordan and envisage an independent Palestinian entity. Yet these groups do not reflect the more traditional leadership. This leadership was apparently not consulted in any meaningful way by Hussein before he announced his proposal.

And while it is not prepared to denounce the King, it is also not inclined to admit that Hussein can, even in theory, dictate the future. Moreover, the King's proposal from Amman which does not somehow come to grips with the fact that the future can only be determined in negotiation with Israel is inherently barren.

NIXON TO U.S.S.R. ON MAY 22

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — President Nixon will begin his official visit to Moscow on May 22 for talks with Soviet leaders, the White House announced yesterday.

The announcement said the President will be accompanied by Mrs. Nixon, will review all major issues, with a view to improving bilateral relations and enhancing the prospects for world peace.

The Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) were due to resume in Helsinki on March 28, he said, and he could not say whether any agreement would be ready by the time Mr. Nixon arrived in Moscow.

The decision by the Soviet leaders to invite the President to Moscow was announced on October 12 last to other countries on his way to or from the Soviet Union. Asked about early reports that Mr. Nixon might visit Poland, the spokesman said, "At this moment, nothing has been decided."

Mr. Ziegler could not predict whether President Nixon's summit meetings in Moscow would be the occasion for the signing of an American-Soviet agreement on the limitation of armaments.

Referendum for French on E.E.C.

PARIS (Reuter). — President Pompidou yesterday announced that a referendum would be held in France to ratify the treaties of adhesion of Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Norway to the Common Market.

He told a press conference that it would have been easy to have used the parliamentary method to approve the treaties and there would have been big favourable majorities in both the National Assembly and the Senate.

"But I think it is my duty, and that it is fundamentally democratic, to ask the French people to make their choice directly on this policy in favour of Europe," he said.

It will be the first referendum in France since the vote in April, 1969, on Senate and regional reform, which led to General de Gaulle's resignation.

Mr. Pompidou did not say when the referendum would be held. "Treaty's membership goes beyond the question of simple management," he said. It was a question of Europe's future — both internally and externally.

Mr. Pompidou, who spoke at length about Europe during his 90-minute press conference, said there should be no doubt about France's political will in building up Europe.

Arab States expected to turn down Hussein plan

By ANAN SAFADI
Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter
Egypt, Syria and Libya are expected to oppose King Hussein's proposal for a Jordanian-Palestinian federation linking Jordan with the West Bank, after the Palestine Liberation Organization rejected the plan last night. The P.L.O. spokesman said in Beirut that the terrorist movement, which held an emergency session on the issue, had "decisively" ruled out the proposal.

The Hussein plan was earlier rejected by Iraq and Algeria. The other Arab states, apparently still undecided on exactly how to reject the plan, yesterday held secret official consultations. Some Arab capitals had cautious reservations, while others treated the issue with evident suspicion.

Jordanian Foreign Minister Abdullah Salah said yesterday that King Hussein meant to implement his proposals "only after the liberation" of the territories held by Israel since 1967. Salah said that the Jordanian Government decided yesterday to resume the payment of salaries to its former civil servants living on the West Bank, an East Jerusalem source told The Jerusalem Post last night.

The decision was adopted some 24 hours after King Hussein presented his federation plan. Salaries to former West Bank government officials continued to be paid after the 1967 war, but were suspended last July.

The decision to resume payments appears to be a way of seeking support for the plan among the former Jordanian civil servants, almost all of whom are now employed by the Israel administration.

Jordan was now awaiting reactivation of the mission of U.N. envoy Dr. Gunnar Jarring. Damascus Radio said last night that Syria, Egypt and Libya had discussed the Hussein plan at the highest levels, noting that the Syrian leadership, under President Hafez Assad, was in constant meeting over the proposal. The radio said that the three countries, linked in a tripartite federation, were withholding official comment until they had consulted with the P.L.O., which the radio said represented all terrorist organizations.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who returned home last night after a one-day visit to Khartoum, was reported to have discussed the Hussein plan with Sudanese President Ja'afar Numeiri. Sadat was quoted on arrival in Cairo as saying that his government will never bargain with the rights of the Palestinian people.

From Baghdad, the Iraqi authorities were reported to have begun urgent consultations with Egypt and Syria on the Iraqi proposal for a federation between Baghdad, Cairo and Damascus, as a measure to foil the Hussein plan. (See page three.)

The official Iraqi News Agency reported that Foreign Minister Muratada el-Hadithi yesterday conferred in Baghdad with the Egyptian and Syrian ambassadors over the Iraqi plan, which Cairo and Damascus completely ignored yesterday.

HUSSEIN PLAN AT THE KNESSET Meir: Not acceptable, no-limit talks better

'Mere words,' Dayan says

By DAVID LANDAU
Jerusalem Post Reporter
"Mere words" is Defence Minister Moshe Dayan's verdict on King Hussein's proposal for a federation of Trans- and Cis-Jordan; "words which do not open a pathway to any agreement or solution."

Speaking to a unit of paratroopers in Jerusalem's Binyanei Ha'Ooma last night, the Defence Minister compared King Hussein's latest statement to the verbiage issued from other Arab capitals recently — the Egyptian statement to Dr. Jarring in Cairo, Syria's "hypocritical statement" accepting the 1967 U.N. resolution, and the Lebanese statements at the Security Council.

Mr. Dayan said that if the real political struggle which he had hoped for — and still hope for — failed to come as a substitute for the shooting, he was afraid the shooting would start up again.

"With words," the Defence Minister said, "one gets nowhere. Suddenly Hussein remembers that his grandfather Abdullah, when he was young and handsome, managed to extend his kingdom to within 15 kms. of the sea. So what? It is 3,000 years since trumpet-blasts helped anyone — and even then they didn't help Hussein."

The Israel Defence Force's main problem was no longer numerical inferiority, Mr. Dayan told the paratroopers. The main challenge today was qualitative, not quantitative — and very specific: the anti-aircraft missiles, the terrorist infiltrators, the katyushas hitting Kiryat Shmona, the possibility of a Canal crossing. Thus the paratroopers' traditional valour and keenness were no longer enough. The corps must be capable of performing specialized and highly technical feats of war-

Jerusalem Post, Knesset Reporter
Premier Golda Meir made plain in the Knesset yesterday that King Hussein's statement on the future of the West Bank was not acceptable, but she reiterated that Israel was as willing, as before, to conduct unconditional negotiations leading to a peace agreement, based on secure, agreed and recognized borders. (Text of Premier's speech on Page 8)

The House approved her stand by a vote of 44 in favour, with four against, and 27 abstentions. She was supported by the Coalition plus Poale Agudat Yisrael; the New Communists voted against, along with Ha'olam Hazeh and Mr. Shimon Cohen (Rad.); Gahal, the Free Centre and the State List abstained — although their vote was a result of complicated parliamentary manoeuvring, and their parliamentary stand would logically have obliged them to vote against, not to abstain.

The resolution: "The Knesset has determined that the historic right of the Jewish people to the Land of Israel is beyond challenge. The Government authorizes the Government to continue its policy in accordance with its basic principles, as approved by the Knesset on December 13, 1959, according to which 'The Government will steadfastly strive to achieve a durable peace with Israel's neighbours through direct negotiations between the parties. Agreed, secure and recognized borders will be laid down in the peace treaties. The peace treaties will assure cooperation and mutual aid, the solution of any problem that might be a stumbling-block in the path to peace, and the avoidance of any aggression, direct or indirect. Israel will continue to be willing to negotiate without prior conditions, from either side, with any of the neighbouring states for the conclusion of a peace treaty. Without a peace treaty, Israel will continue to maintain in full the situation as established by the cease-fire and will consolidate its position in accordance with the vital requirements of its security and development.'"

The Knesset supports the Government in its endeavours to further peace by negotiating with the Arab states according to the resolutions of the Knesset. In her statement, Mrs. Meir made the following points, among others:

- Unilateral moves or proclamations will not bring Jordan one step closer to peace;
- It is ludicrous to assert that Hussein's plan is an agreed plan, or the product of prior consultation with Israel;
- His plan affects Israel's most vital interests;
- Jordan would be making a grave mistake if it inflamed the expansionist emotions of the Palestinians;
- Israel will pursue its liberal policy in the West Bank and keep the River Jordan bridges open;
- Jordan's new internal stability is a positive development, as is also the fact that the King did not join the efforts to create an East-West front;
- King Hussein's plan shows that he has not yet learned the lesson of the Six Day War;
- The King has labelled those who doubt his plan as betrayers of national unity;
- Although Israel has never interfered in the internal affairs of the Arab states, in this case the King has behaved as though

Two soldiers killed in mine blast

TEL AVIV. — An officer and a corporal were killed and five soldiers wounded when their command car touched off a mine laid on a dirt track some three kilometres north-west of Carmiel, in Central Galilee, at 9:30 yesterday morning.

The mine is believed to have been of Chinese manufacture and of a type frequently used by terrorist units. It could not be ascertained here yesterday whether the mine had been recently planted or whether it was laid during one of last month's terrorist incursions into the area, centrally located on the Acre-Safed highway.

Sappers were at work throughout the daylight hours yesterday, attempting to reconstruct the mine.

Allon, Eban may hold talks in Washington

Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent
Deputy Premier and Education Minister Yigal Allon and Foreign Minister Abba Eban may hold talks with U.S. Government officials in Washington before President Nixon's trip to Moscow. Mr. Allon is due to attend an educational convention in Washington early in May, while Mr. Eban may go to the U.S. capital in April.

Mr. Allon is scheduled to address the annual convention of the U.S. National Academy of Education, which is devoting one day of its three-day meeting to Israeli education. The convention is to take place in Washington from May 4 to 7.

Mr. Eban has been invited to attend the 20th anniversary convention of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a lobbying organization founded when Mr. Eban was Ambassador in Washington. However the convention is scheduled to take place on April 30, the day after Independence Day, and Mr. Eban's acceptance of the invitation depends on whether the organizers will be able to change the date, as he will not be able to absent himself from Israel at that time, according to circles close to the Foreign Ministry.

Erhmann or Bormann? Bolivia checking identity of jungle semi-recluse

BOGOTA, Colombia (Reuter). — Secret police were yesterday checking the identity of an aged semi-recluse living in a remote jungle area in southern Colombia after a local magazine claimed he was Nazi war criminal Martin Bormann. Police chief General Luis Quiroga Valderama said he had ordered a "rigorous" investigation based on the identity of the German-born man who says his name is Johann Erhmann.

The weekly news magazine "Siete Dias" claimed yesterday that the man, who lives with his Indian wife, a daughter and a grandchild in a house deep in the Putumayo jungle, is in fact Adolf Hitler's former deputy.

U.S. airlines establishing anti-hijack fund

NEW YORK (Reuter). — Five leading U.S. airlines yesterday announced an agreement to underwrite a $250,000-reward fund to help deter hijackings and extortion attempts. The fund would be used to provide rewards to those furnishing information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone involved in airline extortion or hijacking.

The five airlines, American, East-ern, Pan American, Trans World and United, in a joint announcement, said they had each pledged $50,000 to set up the fund.

Hanoi units strike out in heaviest attacks

SAIGON (UPI). — Communist infantry and artillery teams poured out of their jungle camps yesterday and Wednesday night to hit army bases and towns in the heaviest attacks in more than five months, military spokesmen reported.

Allied commands reported 42 shellings and ground attacks from 6 a.m. Wednesday to 6 a.m. yesterday against U.S. and South Vietnamese positions, with civilians bearing the brunt of most of the attacks. The Communist activity spread in these attacks to the central coastal areas.

The U.S. command reported two more "protective reaction" strikes against North Vietnamese anti-aircraft sites on Wednesday, the 94th and 95th of the year. The targets were sites well north of the demilitarized zone and were anti-aircraft and missile sites menacing U.S. planes bombing the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos.

Fighting tapered off in Cambodia where a 50,000-man South Vietnamese triple task force has sliced in to old Communist sanctuary areas, but the South Vietnamese reported finding an abandoned Communist base camp 8 kms. north-west of the Cambodian city of Kampong Trach, the fourth such base captured or destroyed during the drive. This one was blown up.

Pope confers with B'nai B'rith head

ROME (Reuters). — Pope Paul VI said yesterday he was gratified by cooperative relationships that have developed between Catholics and Jews.

The Pope was speaking to David M. Blumberg, of Knoxville, Tennessee, international president of B'nai B'rith, and four other officials of the 500,000-member organization, whom the pontiff received in an audience at the Vatican.

Mr. Blumberg presented the Pope with a 3,500-year-old clay bowl from the era of the Patriarchs, which the B'nai B'rith group had brought from Israel as "a symbol of the common spiritual heritage and ancestry" of Catholics and Jews.

"I hope it will symbolize too our common effort to strengthen the mutual respect and sense of dignity between our communities," Mr. Blumberg said.

He told the Pope that the bowl from the Holy Land also symbolized "the deep sense of spiritual affinity that the Jews of the world have with the land and the people of Israel."

Replying, the Pope said the spiritual meaning of the gift was important to him because it conveyed the tradition common to both faiths. He also recalled Vatican efforts to rescue Jews during the Hitler era.

Others in the B'nai B'rith delegation were Rabbi Benjamin M. Kahn, its executive vice-president, Herman Edinger, director of international affairs, and Bernard Simon, director of public relations, all of Washington, D.C.

Riad to visit China next week

CAIRO (Reuters). — Egypt's former Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad will leave here early next week on a seven-day visit to China as envoy of President Anwar Sadat, well-informed sources said yesterday.

Mr. Riad, now presidential adviser for foreign affairs, will be going to Peking at the invitation of the Chinese government. The purpose of his visit was not immediately known, sources said.

BUFFALO. — A police in Baghdad shot dead a stray buffalo which charged into the airport tarmac and headed for a parked Trident jet. The animal earlier tried to enter the terminal building — but the doors were closed.

This scene of wreckage, in which nine persons were killed and 51 were injured, was the result of a massive pile-up on a fog-bound stretch of the M1 motorway 56 kms. north of London yesterday morning. They were involved in a collision with a chemical truck, seen at right, that sent out billows of poisonous fumes. Over 100 vehicles were involved. Visibility was down to about 20 metres at the time of the crashes, soon after 8 o'clock. (AP radiophoto)

Knesset airs Hussein Plan

he was master in areas which do not belong to him, and which are not under his control;
• His plan is likely to encourage extremists seeking war with Israel.

The Coalition resolution noted Premier Meir's speech about the Hussein statement. It did not reject the Amman plan explicitly — perhaps with an eye to overseas opinion, according to sources inside the Alignment. The second item in the resolution, mentioning the Jewish people's historic rights to Eretz Yisrael as not open to challenge, was included with an eye on the Land of Israel sympathizers in the Alignment and the N.R.P.; with an eye on the Zionist Congress which had passed that same resolution; and with a view to warding off Gahal criticism.

The third item reiterated the Coalition guidelines of December, 1969, regarding peace through direct negotiations, with the aim of setting the item on historic rights into a realistic context.

The fourth item reiterated subsequent Knesset decisions, on efforts to "foster peace through negotiation," which authorized the Government to proceed with Dr. Jarring's initiative for indirect talks, and the interim Suez Canal initiative. Foreign Minister Abba Eban had suggested that this item was essential.

The Coalition resolution thus was constructed on a basis whereby each clause limited the previous one to create a balance, and please friends and foes alike.

GAHAL VERSION

A Gahal resolution on rights to the Land of Israel differed from the clause in the Alignment one, by omitting the word "historic." Gahal abstained on the Alignment resolution, without voting against, in order to show its chivalrous generosity, as it were, despite the fact that the Alignment refused to vote for the Gahal resolution. The Gahal resolution was only voted down by 37 votes to 31.

After the last speech in the debate, the House recessed for three hours as the resolution was drafted.

The Gahal Opposition leader, Mr. Menahem Begin, opened the debate on Premier Meir's statement with a blistering attack on Hussein's plan for a two-Bank federation.

Israel's reply to the King, Mr. Begin said, should be to apply Israel law to the whole of Eretz Yisrael, as it had done vis-a-vis Jerusalem, in 1967. King Hussein's aggression in the Six Day War had deprived him of any claims he may have had to Judea and Samaria, which in any case belong to the Jewish People, Mr. Begin said.

No further political concessions must be made, the Gahal leader urged, because those that had been made so far had not brought peace one whit closer.

Mr. Begin took issue with Mapam for an item in its daily, "Al Hachshar," yesterday, which noted that some elements in the King's plan were in line with Israel's conceptions — according to what the paper described as "authoritative circles in Jerusalem."

He bestowed a compliment as well as criticism upon Defence Minister Moshe Dayan for his recent TV interview in the U.S. Mr. Dayan did well to state that he saw little difference between Tel Aviv, Hebron and Jericho, because they were all "homeland." So why did Mr. Dayan refuse to lay claim to Israel sovereignty in Hebron and Jericho too, Mr. Begin asked?

The main Labour Alignment speaker in the debate, Mr. Haim Zadok, said there was little difference of opinion in the House about the Jewish People's historic rights to Eretz Yisrael. The difference was over the feasibility of realizing these rights just now.

Israel should make it absolutely clear that United Jerusalem was and would remain the capital of Israel.

Israel. The West Bank had never been sovereign Jordanian territory, and the Gaza Strip was none of Hussein's affair, because Jordan had no rights to it.

Mr. Zadok said that, as long as Jordan and Israel had not signed a peace agreement defining the borders between the two countries, King Hussein's constitutional plans, in so far as they referred to the West Bank, were no more than an academic exercise in a vacuum, devoid of all political significance, or practical significance, and mainly geared to internal Arab aims.

Israel had always held that in the area between the Mediterranean Sea and the border of Iraq, there was room for two sovereign states — Israel, a Jewish state, and another, an Arab state.

The name and the organizational structure of the Arab state were an internal Arab affair after peace was signed. However, peace within agreed borders must precede all plans for administrative arrangements within the neighbouring Arab state, since to do the opposite would be a deception.

NOT LIKE SINAI
Mr. Zevulun Hammer (N.R.P.) said that the Sinai desert was not necessarily an historic part of Eretz Yisrael, and the debate on the control of Sinai lay in the security sphere. But the West Bank was something quite different. Places such as Shechem, Bethlehem, Jericho and Hebron, carried such an emotional content, that their ties were not less — and perhaps more strong — than the ties to many places in pre-war Israel.

Mr. Moshe Carmel (Alignment-Labour) said that Jerusalem had never been the capital city of any Arab state and never would be. Jerusalem was open, and would remain open, to all the faiths, for them to worship their Maker in freedom and dignity, but it would not return to the hands of those who had trampled elementary human rights, as Jordan had done for 19 years.

Mr. Gideon Hausner (Independent Liberal) said that King Hussein apparently needed to remind the world of his existence, otherwise he would not be taking the initiative now. He said that the areas were open for all to see how Israel defined its function there and to compare this with King Hussein's performance. The bridges had been kept open for trade and human contacts had been made possible.

After the West Bank elections, Mr. Hausner said, his faction would propose further measures to promote the welfare of the West Bankers.

KISHON REPLY NEEDED
Mr. Isser Harel (State List) said the lesser affair was just a storm in a teacup, to which the humorist Ephraim Kishon would have given the most appropriate reaction. Hussein did not even have a chance of winning back the sympathies of the Palestinians once again. Hussein as well as the extremist Arab states had every cause to be concerned about events in the areas since the Six Day War, and the revolutionary change in the mood of the Arabs there towards Israel, which would pave the road to peace.

Mr. Dov Zeldin (Alignment-Mapam) said there was room in this country for Arab and Jew alike, with the rights and privileges of both nations assured. Israel must tell its Arab neighbours that, in fixing future borders, our desire is not only for security but for agreement. He described the West Bank elections as "a first step to Palestinian political autonomy."

Mr. Avraham Werdiger (Poale Aguda) said that, even though the Hussein Plan seemed amusing, the world tended to regard it as a contribution to the solution of the Middle East dispute. Israel must tell the world clearly that Judea and Samaria cannot be yielded and that the Jordanian flag can never fly over Jerusalem.

Mr. Shmuel Tamir (Free Centre) called the plan "worthless" but suggested that Hussein based his pretensions to deal with areas not belonging to him and a population which rejected him, on the policy of the Israel Government over the past couple of years. The Allon Plan, too, had encouraged Hussein.

RAPS MAPAM

Mr. Mordechai Ben-Porat (Alignment-Labour) suggested that King Hussein's statement did not deserve such attention on the part of the House. He devoted some time to criticizing Mapam for its protests against the security fence operation near Rafah at the southern end of the Gaza Strip. It was not logical for Mapam to support security outposts and criticize civilian settlements, he said. They were well aware that the villages in the Jordan Valley and on the Golan Heights were there to stay.

Mr. Shmuel Mikunis (Communist) noted that Washington and Paris alike seemed to approve of the Hussein Plan. The U.S. had apparently collaborated in the creation of the plan with Palestinian personalities, but some Israel involvement was not to be ruled out. The first step to foil the Hussein Plan was for Israel to recognize the rights of the Palestinians to self-determination.

Mr. Uri Avneri (Ha'Olam Hazeh) said the King would not have made his statement had he not believed that an arrangement with Israel was close at hand, whereby Israel would give him back most of the areas. This belief doubtless depended on an arrangement obtained through the Americans, who are interested in stabilizing their deployment of forces throughout the Middle East.

Mr. Tewfik Toubi (New Communists) said that it would be impossible to set up a quailing regime in the West Bank, and it would be impossible to find collaborators so as to create a liberal regime for the conquerors. The West Bank elections would be a total failure, because the Palestinians would not take part. How can one expect the Arabs of the West Bank and Gaza to express their will before withdrawal?

Mr. Shalom Cohen (Independent) said that Arab defeats and Arab expulsions had not severed their ties with the land, just as 2,000 years of exile could not sever the ties of the Jews. He said that Hussein's plan was the plan of a dictator, without reference to the will of the people in the East Bank or the West Bank and just garnished with a few trappings of democracy.

Elrom killer sentenced to death

ISTANBUL (Reuters). — A martial law court yesterday sentenced to death a self-confessed member of the "Turkish Peoples' Liberation Army" for his part in the kidnaping and murder here last May of Israel consul-general Ephraim Elrom.

The man, Ziya Yilmaz, was one of three accused in the case who escaped from a military jail here on November 30 while on trial for attempting to overthrow the constitution by force and kidnaping and murdering Mr. Elrom.

One of the three, Ulas Bardakci, was shot dead by security forces in an operation on February 19 in which Yilmaz was recaptured.

Mahir Cayan, the third accused in the Elrom case, was being sought by security forces following his escape from jail.

The prosecution alleged that Yilmaz was among a group of "Liberation Army" members who kidnaped the Israel diplomat at his Istanbul apartment.

Two of the three military judges announced sentence of death for Yilmaz and the third gave an opinion for life imprisonment. The sentence is subject to appeal.

Nine men and four women originally went on trial last August charged with leftwing underground activities and involvement in Mr. Elrom's death.

Of these, two of the men were sentenced to death and are appealing and three women were sentenced to life imprisonment.

Belfast bomb blows up army sapper

BELFAST (UPI). — Two British Army bomb disposal men were killed instantly on Wednesday when a charge they were to defuse blew up near a production by Roman Catholic army army spokesmen said the men were working for two hours on the trunk of a car after the vehicle contained a "big" charge. They later felt they were in charge of the car and put it open. But just as they touched the vehicle, the blast went off.

"Obviously, there was a device anti-handling device on the vehicle," an army source said. "We've come across such before, but this one must have been special because the man who was an expert at this sort of work. The new explosion came from a man Catholic in Ulster, several days of prayers for peace here in Ireland. Guerrillas assassinated another policeman and crippled militiamen on Tuesday night.

Bhutto and Kosygin confer in Moscow

MOSCOW. — President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan arrived here yesterday for talks with Kremlin leaders, on his first visit to a country which has recognized Bangla Desh.

He was welcomed by Premier Alexei Kosygin and Tass agency reported shortly after that they had begun talks in the Kremlin. (President Nikolai Podgorny is holidaying on the Black Sea, according to diplomats.)

Observers here expect Mr. Kosygin to use Mr. Bhutto's visit to try to improve the situation in the Indian subcontinent.

Diplomatic sources said President Bhutto may seek Kremlin help in the repatriation of 94,000 Pakistani prisoners of war still held in India following the war last December.

Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, Premier of Bangla Desh, was in Moscow earlier this month and won pledges of Soviet economic aid.

Banners along the route from the airport said: "May friendly relations between the peoples of the Union and Pakistan strengthen and develop."

A veiled hint that all may be plain sailing during President Bhutto's talks in the Kremlin was reported by some observers in an article from the customary biography of visiting statesman which appeared in "Pravda" yesterday.

Normally, these items express hope that the visitor's stay here will strengthen his country's relations with the Soviet Union, but Bhutto's biography contained such comments.

Earlier yesterday, Mr. Bhutto was reported in a newspaper to have said that he is anxious to have peace talks with Pakistan Minister of State, Gen. Yousaf Karzai, either in New Delhi or in Pakistan.

"I am anxiously looking forward to such a meeting," he was quoted as telling two journalists, who had personally invited to Pakistan. (Reuters)

North Sea oil bonanza for Britain

LONDON (AP). — The British Government has announced an undersea oil bonanza in the North Sea that it said will bring billions into the national exchequer.

Sir John Eden, Minister for Trade, told the Commons on Wednesday that by 1980, some 75 million tons of oil a year could be brought into the country from newly discovered wells under the North Sea and on the continental shelf. Such a quantity is the equivalent of 75 per cent of Britain's current annual consumption.

The government, he said, was awarding licences to 75 companies or groups to search for new oil and gas deposits in the sea.

Eden said the potential oil yield of the underwater fields would be worth up to £500m. a year to Britain's foreign trade balance.

Tradeau going to China

OTTAWA (AP). — An invitation to Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau to visit mainland China, was deemed tentatively for next year, has been made official, it was announced here yesterday. No date was mentioned.

Government spokesmen said new Chinese Ambassador, Kuang, delivered the invitation of a courtesy call last month on Foreign Secretary Mitchell Sharp. Canada recognized the Peking Government in October 1970.

Soviet Jews request emigration aid from Italian party congress

MILAN (Reuters). — The Italian Communist Party Congress here yesterday received a cable from Soviet Jews asking its support for those Jews who wished to emigrate to Israel.

The cable asked the supporters of the party — biggest Communist Party in the West — so that Soviet Jews could realize their "historic right to emigrate to Israel, a right denied until now by the Soviet authorities."

RHODES. — A Harvard graduate student has been named the first American woman to receive the Rhodes fellowship. She is Mrs. Jol Leopol, a Harvard Ph.D. candidate in European history.

Cables in brief

TIME. — Britain moves into summer time on Sunday, when clocks will be moved forward one hour. (London will be one hour behind Jerusalem.)

AIDS. — Thieves stole "marriage aids" worth A$116 (about IL580) from Perth's first sex shop.

DEVALUATION. — Brazil devalued the cruzeiro Wednesday, setting the buying rate at 5.810 per U.S. dollar and the selling rate at 5.845. It was the second devaluation this year. The former exchange rates of 5.75 and 5.785, buying and selling, were set on January 27.

TURTLES. — Ecuador has banned commercial fishing of the giant ocean-going turtles that live on the Galapagos Islands. The Ecuadorian Production Ministry said that the limited turtle fishing continued, the species would be completely destroyed.

Marisa (over-exposed) wants her photos back

By JACK MAURICE
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

PARIS. — Marisa Berenson, 24-year-old French starlet and fashion model, who is engaged to marry Baron Guy de Rothschild's son David, is suing a Paris photographer for the return of a series of daring photographs which show her in the nude. Miss Berenson, a niece of art historian Bernard Berenson and granddaughter of fashion designer Elsa Schiaparelli, claimed before the third chamber of Paris's civil court on Wednesday that continued publication of the pictures could damage her relationship with her fiancé and in-laws.

The photographer, Arnaud de Rosnay, told the court that he wishes to keep the pictures because they are his own work and also a pleasant souvenir of his friendship with Marisa.

Marisa's lawyer, Mr. Marlet, said: "Miss Berenson particularly wants the photos back because she has just become engaged to a young man whose family is world-famous and who, like herself, would hardly appreciate this sort of idle publicity."

Mr. de Rosnay's lawyer, Mr. De-winter, argued that Mr. de Rosnay had every right to use the pictures as he wished, under a contract signed by Marisa in 1969. The lawyer asked, "Can you imagine the model who posed for Mona Lisa refusing to allow the picture to be shown in the Louvre?"

The court postponed its decision on Marisa's plea for a veto on further publication of the pictures and her demand for $1,000 in damages from Mr. de Rosnay.

The London "Sunday Mirror" published a photograph on February 26 showing David de Rothschild dining in a restaurant with Marisa, whose right breast was fully exposed.

Now you see it — now you don't

NEW YORK (UPI). — Why would anyone pay two artists $65,000 for paintings — just to cover them up in a few months with brickwork?

Arien Reilly said development Co. has done just that. Arien paid Polish-born painter Tania and Greek-born geometric abstractionist Nasso Daphnis, $65,000 to cover 50,000 square feet of steel skeleton with designs in brilliantly glowing colours while the new 33-storey Arien Reilly building was going up in New York's Times Square.

In the next few weeks, the 300-foot tall display will be covered by the skyscraper's curtain wall, perhaps to be rediscovered many years hence by a wrecking crew.

Why did Arien do it? "We wanted to do something for New York," said a company spokesman. "Most think of a stark steelwork skeleton as something ugly, so we decided to make it beautiful for the nine months while it and the curtain wall were going up."

PREMIER REPLIES TO JORDAN KING'S STATEMENT

Hussein plan pretentious, one-sided, says Meir

Following is the text of Premier Golda Meir's statement in the Knesset yesterday...

Settlement and agreement have to be reached. The State of Israel, according to this conception, is nothing more than the result of a Zionist plot to dominate Palestine...

Israel or without agreement with her. Any constructive solution can be obtained only through understanding and agreement with Israel...

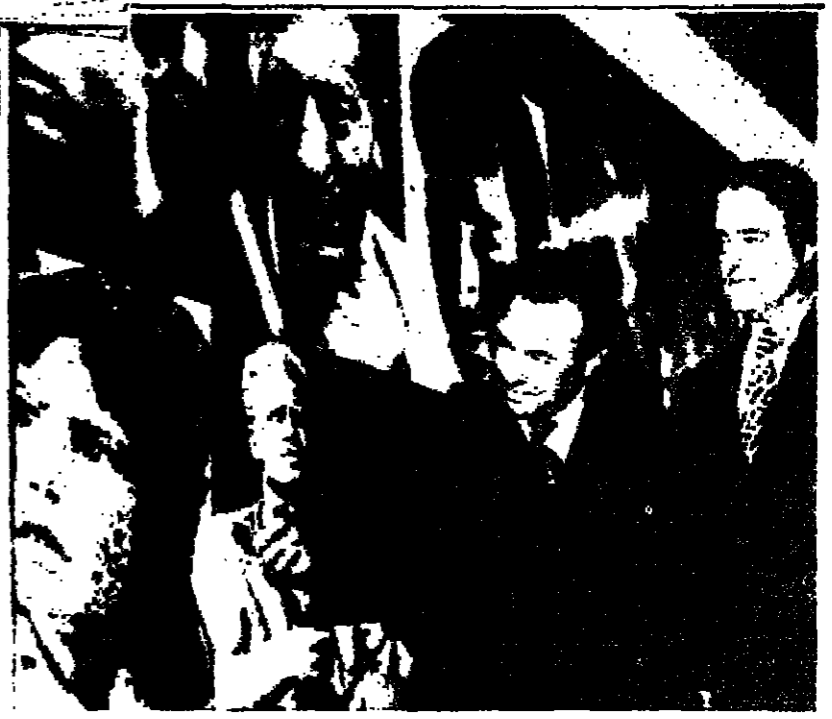

It is hard to imagine a country for which peace would be more beneficial than Jordan. If Jordan continues to act in accordance with her genuine and independent interests...

No unilateral declarations or actions whatsoever will bring Jordan one inch nearer to peace. No sophistry, even if it wins banner headlines, will lead to any constructive change...

Cairo says Hussein evading a real decision

A leading Egyptian analyst said yesterday one of the motives behind King Hussein's proposal for a United Arab Kingdom is to exclude Palestinian resistance...

Sadek charged that Hussein's proposal "will accomplish the U.S. goal of completely isolating Egypt from the rest of the Arab world..."

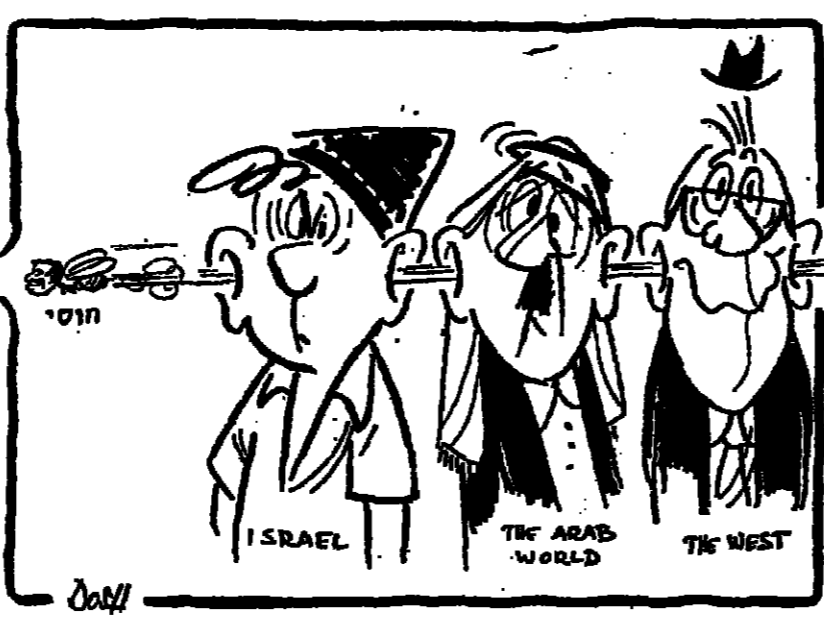

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, left, and Mr. Sargent Shriver were photographed viewing an exhibit at the Israel Cultural Centre in New York on Wednesday night...

Iraq sets out rival unit plan

BEIRUT (Reuters). — King Hussein's plan for solving the Palestine problem was derided in a rival Arab unit scheme proposed by Iraq on Wednesday night...

Angela Davis accepts jury

SAN JOSE, Calif. (Reuters). — Angela Davis, accused of conspiracy to murder and kidnap, this week surprised a courtroom in the midst of selecting alternate jurors when she rose and said: "Though I cannot say this is a jury of my peers..."

India sets 'conditions' for peace talks

By DENZIL PEREIRA NEW DELHI (ANS). — The New Delhi Government has indicated to the Soviet Union a number of issues as the essential points it would like discussed at the India-Pakistan "peace" meeting...

India has told Moscow it will in its turn vacate those enclaves in Pakistan territory it held on the other side of the Munawar Tawi (river) as well as other territory...

Plan is surrender

Meanwhile the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) said the king's announcement related to the "floating part of a plan of surrender (to Israel)..."

"The New York Times" said in an editorial yesterday that although Hussein's plan "has been deplored by Israel, denounced by Arab extremists..."

Looks unreal

In London the "Daily Telegraph" commented yesterday that "plans for a federal Jordan without any reference to the little matter of Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip components thereof may look unreal..."

70,000 tourists expected for Pessah, Easter

Jerusalem Post Aviation Reporter LOD AERPORT. — A record 70,000 tourists are expected to spend Passover and Easter — which overlap this year — in Israel.

The seven-day period from March 22 to March 29 will be particularly trying for airline staff. El Al has 105 planned flights, as compared with 93 flights during the corresponding period of last year.

Exploits opportunity

This was taken by observers as a reference to Libya, now linked with Egypt and Syria in the Federation of Arab Republics, but was not a member of the Baathists' short-lived attempt at a merger between Iraq, Egypt and Syria in 1963.

The Iraq announcement referred indirectly to this earlier abortive attempt by saying the present union offer was made only to Egypt and Syria "for well-known reasons..."

Yesterday the Iraq News Agency reported that Baghdad will refuse to receive a delegation which King Hussein of Jordan is sending to explain his plan. The report described the King's proposal as a "new surrender plan"...

'Rain worth more than gold' to Galilee farmers

By YAA'OOV FREEDLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

PA.— Like in the old song, it "Yes, we have no bananas," but this time it was not a banana plantation in Galilee that was giving farmers a welcome rest from field work and saving on irrigation had been turned on in some patches and avocado orchards were as bright as last week's sun.

Although there were still some clouds from the Agriculture Ministry to be heard, the real reason for more research funds to outstanding problems, especially that of manpower. "We need mechanization," the farmers, Arab and Jewish, told The Jerusalem Post.

They don't sell well any more and we'll have to replace them soon. We think that grapefruit is the fruit of the future and to make the change, big investments will be needed, more than we can finance ourselves. That means credits," he said. The port strikes had also hit exports.

CELERY SELLING
On the other hand, the situation "could hardly be better" for celery growers, one of them at Nativ Ha-Ashdod village told The Post. "We are exporting all we can grow and we have no problems," he said, adding quickly that this was due in large measure to the fact that "we are good farmers. You have to be to export."

A veteran cow man in the area also told me that "things are looking up if the Ministry will show understanding." After years of being confined by quotas, "we are now at last free to produce as much milk as we can, which gives us a chance to really prove ourselves," he noted.

Quotas had been cancelled because demand for milk and milk products was steadily rising in Israel's affluent society. "But to enlarge our herds will take big investments and the Ministry will have to provide credits," he said.

Present controlled prices were also too low, he went on, mainly because devaluation had forced up fodder prices. "We too suffer from a shortage of manpower, but now that controls have been lifted, dairy farming is so promising that there are enough men in the kibbutzim ready to work with the cows. If Ministry policy will make it clear that we can rely on the future," he said.

The regional veterinarian, Mr. Oded Markusfeld, of Nahariya, noted that cows in the coastal area were less fruitful than elsewhere, and as the number of calves makes the difference between a profitable or losing herd, the problem should be investigated. His hunch was that the heat and damp in the coastal strip were the cause. "But scientific research is called for and the Ministry should finance it."

SATISFIED FARMER
At Maara, the Arab village near Acre, was the most satisfied farmer of all. Kamal Hamdi, father of ten sons and nine daughters, grows vegetables. But unlike practically everybody else in Western Galilee, Mr. Hamdi sells only on the Israeli market.

"What do I care how they eat in Europe and England, as long as we all eat well here," he summed up. "We have a proverb which says 'look after yourself first and then worry about others,'" he expanded. "Hardly able to take his eyes off the rain—"worth more than gold and free"—he was sorry only that his sons didn't want to stay on the farm.

"They're all intelligent. Studying, teaching or working in other places outside the village. Only two of the daughters stay here. But as long as I'm healthy (he looked like an advertisement for the healthy life), I'll carry on. And the future? Only Alla knows."

He added that "if things should really get bad there's always the Ministry of Agriculture to turn to. That's what they're for, aren't they?"

Another important product in the area are roses. "The good ones we send to Europe," The Post was told at the Shavel Zion packing centre. "Before they have a chance to open we put them in cold storage here. Every day, a refrigerated truck comes round to take them to Lod for airfreighting to Europe. Tomorrow afternoon these roses will be sold by a florist in Hamburg, Amsterdam or Zurich." Alisa, one of the packers, told me, as she cut the ends of the stalks and removed a thorn from her thumb.

"The crooked ones, or those already too far open, we sell in Israel," she said putting a bunch of magnificent, long-stemmed yellow beauties into the refrigerator. In the summer, all the roses are sold here. Europe supplies its own.

Growers complain that the air-freighting sometimes goes wrong, and the roses arrive "too far gone" and must be destroyed. They also thought that new markets should be opened outside Europe.

The chicken farmers, still restricted by quotas, want them lifted "to give a chance to the big and efficient producers to make money. With the quotas the efficient producer is penalized, unable to exploit his potential," a breeder told The Post. "I think that this is also the reason for the big price fluctuations and the constant surpluses followed by shortages. If we'd be given a free hand things would improve," he said.

Winter's backlash brings rains

Jerusalem Post Staff

Winter's backlash struck most of the country yesterday, bringing heavy rains and chilling temperatures. Farmers on the whole were pleased with the rain, which soaked the topsoil of their fields— parched after weeks of dry weather.

Despite the heavy rain which lashed Jerusalem, only minor instances of flooding were reported by early evening. The rains soaked the Three-Day March encampment at Beit-El, north of Ramallah, where thousands of marchers are due to arrive on Sunday on the eve of the event.

Tel Aviv and Haifa were wet and miserable as well. Delighted shop owners sold some more winter goods which would otherwise have had to go into storage until next winter. In Haifa, Port, on its way to recovery from the congestion caused by recent strikes, work was halted completely during the first shift. Later the sky cleared and work was resumed.

The citrus food markets suffered as many housewives stayed home hoping for a break in the weather today to do their weekly and pre-Pessah shopping. Beer sheva received 5mm, in the 24-hour period ending at noon yesterday, bringing its season's total to 272mm, 72mm ahead of its average annual rainfall.

Mrs. Sarah Ostrovsky, manager of the "Hebrew Christian" bookshop in Jaffa, tries to evict one of the Jewish Defence League members who demonstrated on the premises on Wednesday.

'Room bank' for tourists up to 350

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter

TEL AVIV.— The Ministry of Tourism's drive to build up a "room bank" for tourists has brought in 1,500 applications so far. Of the rooms offered in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, 350 have been approved for leasing to tourists, it was revealed last night by Mr. Hanoch Givon, the Director-General of the Ministry.

In an address to doctors and lawyers who are members of the J.D.L., Mr. Givon noted that Israel's overseas promotion has been geared to attracting winter tourism, for which there is still accommodation available. There was an 83 per cent increase in tourism in the months October-December compared to the previous winter, he declared. The "highly successful" television advertising campaign which the Ministry conducted in the U.S. last year will be renewed again shortly, he said. This time, however, the cost of the campaign will be shared by other companies, including the Citicruz Marketing Board, El Al, Goteck, Carmel Mizrahi and Sharon Tours.

Individual tourism expenditure rose last year, the Director-General noted. Average expenditure per head in 1971 was $271 compared to $233 the previous year.

J.D.L. protest against Jaffa 'missionaries'

The Jewish Defence League's Israel branch has launched a campaign against missionary activities. According to "Yediot Aharanot" reporter Noah Klieger, J.D.L. members, led by their secretary Yosef Schneider, staged a demonstration on Wednesday evening at a bookstore run by the "Hebrew Christians," 42 Rehov Yefet in Jaffa. The shop is managed by Mrs. Sarah Ostrovsky.

The J.D.L. claimed that the "Hebrew Christians" are trying to proselytize immigrants who are staying at a Jewish Agency hostel located in the same building. After sticking posters on the shop window proclaiming "These are the missionaries," the demonstrators entered the shop, which contains religious literature in many languages, including Russian, English and Spanish. They demanded that Mrs. Ostrovsky cease her "missionary activities." Speaking to the press, Mrs. Ostrovsky vehemently denied the charges and tried to evict the young men from her shop. Finally she called the police, who requested her to go down to headquarters to give evidence.

J.D.L. members announced that they would continue to "harass" missionaries throughout the country.

JDL girl drenches Soviet official with blood

WASHINGTON (Reuter).— A year-old liberal arts student. He said the diplomat, Alexander Yevstafeyev, a press counselor at the Embassy, was drenched in blood and had to change his clothes. The spokesman said the blood was taken from Miss Sotkora and two other students "who wanted to join this act of symbolizing the plight of Soviet Jewry."

Police refused to discuss the case because the girl was a minor. There was no immediate comment on the incident from the Soviet embassy. An eyewitness said the girl overturned a container directly above Yevstafeyev's head and drenched him with a large quantity of blood, shouting "Murderer" and "Free the Jewish prisoners" as she did so. Yesterday, the State Department called for stronger laws to protect foreign diplomats, saying they or their families had suffered 123 attacks or threats of violence in the last nine months. The Nixon Administration was due yesterday to ask Congress for new legislation against murder, harassment, kidnapping or assaults on diplomats.

Beduin pass building test in Sharm

Nineteen Beduin youths—most of whom had never seen a printed page in their lives or held a sophisticated tool—yesterday received certificates qualifying them as skilled workers in the building trade. Completion of their three-month course took place at Sharm el-Sheikh where Mr. Shlomo Amir assistant to the Minister of Labour in the Administered Areas, distributed the certificates.

The youth's final "examination" consisted of an oral test by a Labour Ministry inspector and a practical demonstration of their newly acquired skills—the construction of a prefabricated house, complete with tiled floors and plastered walls. In the past year the Ministry has also opened courses for writers and life-guards in the Merhav Shlomo area. A regional labour exchange has also been opened at Abu Rodeis, where some 800 Beduin have registered.

Black Hebrew trial adjourns two weeks

Jerusalem Post Reporter

BEERSHEVA.— The trial of the five members of the Black Hebrew sect accused of manslaughter in the death of Cornelia Kirkpatrick, a fellow "Hebrew," in Dimona last January, will resume on March 26. Yesterday's and Wednesday's sessions consisted of evidence, mainly of a technical nature, given by four of the accused in defence examination and cross-examination by the prosecution. The trial is expected to wind up by the end of this month.

Absorption loan draw

A lottery held in the Bank of Israel on Wednesday for redeeming Absorption Loan certificates yielded the following winners: 1961: all numbers ending in 8; 1962: all numbers ending in 9; 1963: certificates of Group 1; 1964: certificates of Group 2; 1966: certificates of Group 4. Certificates can be cashed as from April 1. Sums redeemed total IL115m. Drawings take place every year on the same date. Drawings for the 1965 loan have been postponed to October 1, for technical reasons.

Top Moroccan Jews coming for 'dialogue'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV.— Over a hundred leading Moroccan Jews living abroad are coming to Israel next week to meet representatives of the 350,000 immigrants from Morocco in Israel, as well as the leaders of the Ashkenazi community, to sponsor mutual understanding.

"We want a dialogue with the Ashkenazim," Mr. Shaul Ben-Simon, a member of the organizing committee, told The Jerusalem Post yesterday. The President, Prime Minister and Chief of Staff have announced their intention of attending the meetings, which are spread over eight days.

The congress will wind up with the "Mamouna" celebrations with the Moroccan Jews in Israel held annually in Jerusalem the day after Pessah. Unlike the Ashkenazi communities in the Diaspora, the Moroccan Jews failed to organize. Mr. Ben-Simon said. One of the aims of the forthcoming encounter is to create a world federation of Moroccan Jews. Another is to show Israel as it really is—"we are not all Panthers," Mr. Ben-Simon says. But the Moroccan immigration came here without their natural economic, cultural and political leaders, and the situation created a problem which time will solve only if time is used constructively. Mr. Ben-Simon went on. He hopes that a number of these traditional leaders would decide to settle in Israel after they see it for themselves.

Relations with the established Israeli leadership is another aspect of the problem, Mr. Ben-Simon said. "We will judge the willingness of the leadership to help by its presence at the encounter," Mr. Ben-Simon said. The meetings begin at Tel Aviv University on Tuesday, March 28, when Prime Minister Golda Meir is scheduled to speak. The following day, the congress moves to Ashdod, where its participants will spend the seder with local families. Expected to take part in the encounter are 30 leaders from France, 27 from Spain, 20 from Canada, six from the U.S., and two each from Switzerland, Gibraltar and Portugal. It is estimated that in addition to those who settled in Israel, another 350,000 Moroccan Jews live abroad.

Demolition begun to get action out of Jerusalem

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Investors in the hotel planned for the site of the former St. John Ophthalmic Hospital opposite Mt. Zion had requested a permit to demolish the existing building eight months ago, their representatives told The Jerusalem Post yesterday.

Mr. Simon Perez of Madrid said that bulldozers were ordered to begin demolition at the beginning of the week after the Municipality had failed to reply to the request. Mr. Perez said he expected the action would stir the authorities into moving. The Municipality obtained a court order on Tuesday to stop the demolition, but Mr. Perez expressed confidence that a permit would be issued in the very near future. Mr. Perez said that he was General Manager of the American firm investing in the hotel, Stocks and Buildings, Inc. He said he was not himself an investor.

Rogers sends message on Herzog's death

Messages of condolence on the death of Ya'acov Herzog, Director-General of the Prime Minister's Office who died in Jerusalem last week, have been received by Mrs. Pinna Herzog, from U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers and his Assistant for Near Eastern Affairs, Mr. Joseph Sisco. Mr. Rogers wrote: "Your husband was one of your country's finest patriots and a true friend of the U.S."

Wankel engine gets Stock Market moving

Jerusalem Post Financial Reporter

TEL AVIV.— The Wankel engine had its field day on the Stock Market yesterday. Trading opened heavy and irregular, as is usual on Thursdays, but turned very firm following the Dow Jones ticker report that the American Israeli Paper Mills, which owns 50 per cent of Savkal Ltd., which in turn together with Curtis Wright has the licence to produce Wankel motors, received the approval of the Israeli Controller of Foreign Exchange to develop the engine.

The group of 12M shares on the American Stock Exchange rose 1 1/2 of a point to close at $7 a share. Before trading began here, the stock exchange authority decided not to let the shares be traded. Nevertheless, the whole market turned very firm.

Stocks off a fraction

NEW YORK.— The Stock Market was off a fraction in moderate trading yesterday. Brokers relate the decline largely to profit-taking. They say some selling has been prompted by concern over a possible new West Coast dock strike. The Pay Board yesterday voted a reduction in the West Coast dock settlement and $36.93.

Scouts plan kibbutz for Gaza Strip

Jerusalem Post Reporter
NETANYA. — Israel's Scout movement decided here last night to set up a kibbutz in the Gaza Strip, the movement's third kibbutz since the end of the Six Day War.

The decision came at the end of a stormy debate in which some members of the movement's leadership opposed any settlement in the administered territories, particularly in the Gaza Strip.

Avraham Katz of Ihud Hakvutzot Yehakibbutzim, which will take the new settlement under its wing, briefed the meeting on unoccupied agricultural land in the Strip. He said that the Mapam members who came out against further settlement at a meeting in Nir Oz recently did not represent the thinking of kibbutz people in the Gaza Strip area, and that kibbutzim bordering the Strip were looking forward to more settlements.

The Scout executive also decided to set up a group who would do a year of social service in immigrant townships before beginning their military service.

Arabs react T.A. physicist shows stars can be tracked with seismograph

It will refuse to receive any of the Jordanian envoys.

The Jordanian delegation at the U.N. yesterday circulated the Hussein plan to member states.

King Hussein himself seemed yesterday to be making swift moves towards a constitutional implementation of his plan, sending the plan to Parliament for ratification.

In the West Bank, the spontaneous public interest in the Hussein plan seemed to have been short-lived, fading amid the feeling that the proposal was creating more questions than answers.

Reflecting West Bank feelings, the Jerusalem Arabic daily "Al-Kuds" wondered yesterday about the timing and the meaning of the plan. The paper editorially asked what made Hussein voice his willingness to grant autonomy to the West Bank at this time, recalling that he had often pledged to recognize the West Bank's right for self-determination "after Israel withdraws from the area."

Meanwhile, a group of about 20 young intellectuals, mainly from East Jerusalem and Ramallah last night issued a joint statement totally rejecting the Hussein plan. Denouncing the Jordanian move, the young activists said that Hussein was ignoring the Palestinian's right of self-determination.

T.A. physicist shows stars can be tracked with seismograph

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — A seismograph can now be used as a "telescope" to measure the movement of the stars. This new technique has been discovered in experiments carried out recently at Tel Aviv University by physics professor Dror Sadeh. Prof. Sadeh was endeavouring to find further confirmation of the existence of gravitational waves, whose existence Einstein deduced, in 1917.

Confirmation was first obtained by Prof. Joseph Weber of the University of Maryland, whose work was reported on in a paper on July 18, 1969.

Reporting to the press on the discovery, the President of Tel Aviv University, Prof. Yuval Ne'eman, said that it could have "far-reaching implications. Among other things, it could provide a better understanding of gravitational forces that act on earth, as well as a deeper understanding of the stars and their influence."

According to Prof. Ne'eman, the discovery could also lead to a better understanding of the various causes of earthquakes.

Prisons can't cure drug addicts'

TEL AVIV. — The Prisons Service cannot cure drug addicts or provide certain kinds of psychiatric treatment, the Commissioner of Prisons, Mr. Arye Nir, told the Tel Aviv District Court yesterday.

Mr. Nir was replying to a recommendation made by the court in a sentence passed on a drug addict who was convicted of attempted robbery. In its judgment, the court instructed the Prisons Service to treat the prisoner for his addiction.

Replying that the Health Ministry had not included prison clinics among those institutions permitted to deal with drug cures, Mr. Nir pointed out that the courts often made stipulations which the prisons simply could not carry out. (Ihm)

IL1m. promised to Nazareth to pay debts

NAZARETH. — The Government has promised the Nazareth Municipality IL1m. to help ease its debt burden, Prime Minister Meir's Arab Affairs Adviser Shmuel Toledoano told reporters here Wednesday night. The announcement came at the end of a banquet at which Nazareth and its Jewish twinned Upper Nazareth awarded Mrs. Meir the Freedom of both towns.

Mr. Toledoano said the money would be forthcoming once the Municipality did a more thorough job of collecting back-taxes and improved its administrative efficiency.

A week ago Mayor Seif e-Din Zuabi and members of his administration met with Mr. Toledoano and Interior Ministry Director-General Haim Kuberky to ask for help with the town's indebtedness. The promised sum should give the town some breathing space, although it will still leave Nazareth with outstanding debts of IL2m.

Mayor Zuabi threatened two months ago to resign if the Government did not come to Nazareth's aid. He put off his decision until Mrs. Meir's visit. (Ihm)

Herut youth ask to settle near Nablus

A group of Jerusalem high school students belonging to Herut yesterday petitioned Prime Minister Meir to help them settle in the Shechem area.

Stating that they were greatly distressed that the Government was not permitting Jewish settlement in the highlands of Judea and Samaria, they appealed to Mrs. Meir to convince other members of the Government to reverse the situation.

"We know your positive and heartfelt attitude towards Jewish history," they said.

The students' letter added that it was unthinkable that the area could ever be used as a bargaining counter in negotiations. They concluded by saying that they would continue to fight to settle in Samaria regardless of the answer they received, and that they would be very happy if Mrs. Meir would agree to meet with their leaders.

Kiryat Arba to spurn officer

HEBRON. — The Kiryat Arba settlers stopped all their health, education and commercial operations, including the restaurant they run near the Tomb of the Patriarchs, for two hours yesterday in protest against the arrival of an Army officer sent by the Government to manage their affairs. They elected a council two weeks ago.

The officer, Sgan-Aluf Zvi Merhav, after establishing himself in a one-room office, called on Rabbi Moshe Levinger, chairman of the Kiryat Arba council. Rabbi Levinger informed him that he could not expect cooperation from the settlers. He emphasized that the protest was aimed neither at Sgan-Aluf Merhav nor the Army, but solely at the Government for its failure to allow the settlers to have a democratically-elected local council.

Settler representatives will meet shortly with Tel-Aluf Shlomo Gazit, Ministry of Defence Coordinator for the Territories, to state their case.

Considered No. 2 man in the Austrian Socialist movement after Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, he will spend a week here and meet the Prime Minister, and other leaders and tour the country.

Hussein's plan 'unrealistic' — Mitterrand

By MARK SEGAL
Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The French Socialist leader, Francois Mitterrand, last night described King Hussein's proposal for a Federal Kingdom on both sides of the Jordan as "unrealistic."

Talking at a dinner given by the Labour Party Leadership Bureau at the Beit Bert Party College near Kfar Saba, Mr. Mitterrand noted that Hussein spoke about a territory and a population over which he had no control.

He also noted that Hussein did not speak about peace with Israel, which he claimed "compounded the unreasonability of the proposal."

The French Socialist leader in his speech accepted the Israeli argument about defensible and secure borders, about not returning to the lines of June 4, 1967, and against the intervention of the four powers. But, "speaking as a friend," he said he had yet to find an answer from Israeli leaders about what was to be the fate of the Palestinians.

German study group here

A German study mission consisting of prominent businessman and political leaders, arrived in Jerusalem last night for an eight-day visit. Their trip was arranged by Israel Bonds.

The delegation comprises: Dr. Wolfgang Fell, General Manager, Deutsche Kredit u. Handelsbank K.G.a.; Dr. Karl König, Senator for Economy, Berlin, and Mrs. König; Mr. Werner Labode, Director, Berliner Sparkasse; Dr. Dietrich Nebelung, Director and Member, Board of Directors, Berliner Bank, and Mrs. Nebelung; Dr. Rudolf Schmidt, President, Bundesversicherungsanstalt; Mr. Heinz Striek, Finance Senator, Berlin, and Mrs. Striek; Dr. Heinz Wegner, General Manager, Berliner Kraft und Licht (BEKWAG) A.G.; Mr. Gerhard Wilke, head of Dept. of Finance, Nürnberg, and Mrs. Wilke. They are accompanied by Mr. Benjamin Rosen, Managing Director, State of Israel Bonds in West Germany.

CURRENCY IN circulation rose during the week ending Tuesday by IL2m., to stand at IL1,785m. This sum was covered by IL182m. in gold and IL1,602m. in foreign currency.

EARTH AS DETECTOR

Although a number of scientists in addition to Prof. Weber have done important pioneering work in measuring gravitational waves, Prof. Sadeh's innovation was the use of the earth as a detector. The difficulty in conducting such an experiment derives from the fact that the gravitational waves are extremely weak. However, since a new type of pulsating star, the pulsar, was discovered in 1967, new hope arose for detecting such waves, as it was assumed that pulsars have a very large density and rotate very quickly.

According to Einstein's theory, they must emit gravitational waves. To the extent that some of these stars are relatively close to the earth (several scores of light years), there seemed to be a good chance of detecting the waves they emit.

As the effect of these waves is very small (vibration of the earth caused by these waves is one part

YEARS PREPARATION

The gravitational experiment has been in preparation at Tel Aviv University for one year. In this period, a sophisticated electronic system was built. The research project itself took only four months. It was performed at the Geophysics Laboratory of the Weizmann Institute in a cave near Ellat, chosen because of its distance from inhabited areas.

In the last three years, Prof. Sadeh has participated in the detection of four pulsars in the X-ray region. One of these pulsars has also been observed in the Florence and George Wise Observatory at Mitzpeh Ramon. Prof. Sadeh is currently conducting related experiments at the observatory.

'President of Achziv' wants secure borders

ACRE. — The self-styled "President of Achziv," Eli Avivi, sporting long hair, a Mongolian moustache and faded jeans, demanded "secure and recognized borders" for his principality in the Magistrate's Court in Nahariya yesterday.

He has had a festering border dispute with what he referred to as "the neighbouring country." He is suing for the removal of a fence around his territory which bars him from access to the sea.

The other side to the dispute is the National Parks Authority and the Sulam Tsur District Council, whose counsel say Achziv has been declared a National Park area and hence Avivi's holding was fenced in. It was he who was expansionist, they argued.

Hearings were postponed for a week during which Avivi must post a guarantee for IL1,500 as costs and lawyers' fees if he loses his case.

One of the exhibits is a brochure of photos of nude girls entitled "Erotica" taken in Achziv, with captions extolling the attractions of the place, listing some famous visitors and inviting more to come. It was submitted to explain to Magistrate Avraham Hermon why the District Council found it necessary to fence the place in.

Avivi said after the hearing he would launch "a diplomatic campaign" to bring to international attention the "war of attrition" which "the neighbouring country" is waging against him.

Manchester United playing here May 31

TEL AVIV. — Manchester United, the star-studded English First Division football club, will play against a combined Hapoel and Maccabi XI either at Bloomfield or Ramat Gan on May 31, the secretary of the Football Association, Mr. Yosef Dagan, confirmed yesterday.

The Manchester team will be guests of Hapoel. It has such top-notch world crowd-pullers as George Best, Dennis Law, Bobby Charlton, Brian Kidd and their £200,000 acquisition of last week, Ian Moore.

Hadera dustman ordered to end strike

HAIFA. — The District Court here yesterday ordered 48 sanitation department workers of the Hadera Municipality to end their wildcat strike, which started on Wednesday. The men had walked off their jobs — without submitting 15 days' advance notice as required by law — in protest against the findings of a parity committee set up to determine their working conditions and grades.

The court, responding to a request from the Hadera Municipality, ruled that regardless of the justice of their claims, the workers had no right to walk off their jobs without giving prior notice, particularly since their strike could endanger public health. (Ihm)

'Students' fined for evading travel tax

TEL AVIV. — Two women were yesterday fined IL750 each for using forged documents identifying them as students in order to get a tax exemption for their trip abroad.

The two, Monica Fishel, 26, of Tel Aviv, and Lily Horin, 26, of Ramat Gan, had obtained the documents from a secretary at Tel Aviv University last year. On the strength of the paper, they each enjoyed a IL340 deduction on their travel tickets. (Ihm)

Watchman jailed for betraying trust

A watchman at the Hilton Hotel construction site in Jerusalem was sentenced to two years' jail by the District Court yesterday for selling sheets of plywood he was supposed to watch.

The man was Ata Badad, 44. He was convicted of selling 84 sheets of plywood for IL25 each. The theft took place in January.

Ya'acov Egozi, Emek pioneer, dead at 73

Egozi came to this country from Lublin, Poland, in 1919. In the early 1930s, he began to work in tree planting, and planted the first trees in the Balfour Forest. For many years he was Chairman of the Jezreel District Council.

He is survived by his widow, a son and a daughter. Another son, an Air Force pilot, was killed 10 years ago. (Ihm)

Suspects in IL4m. hashish case remanded further

TEL AVIV. — The five men suspected of belonging to the "Ra'anna gang," which allegedly planned to smuggle IL4m. worth of hashish out of the country, had their remand in custody extended by the Magistrate's Court here.

Moshe Savion, of Tel Aviv, was remanded for an additional 15 days. Ami Ya'ari, Aharon Lorber, Zvi Gafkowitz and Aharon Friedman were ordered held for eight more days.

Police told Judge Yehuda Treivish that Friedman's twin brother, Yohanan Perry — now in the U.S. — was the head of the gang.

The suspects were arrested last month after the police allegedly discovered the would-be smugglers packing the drug in disguised "shock absorbers." (Ihm)

IL13m. vocational school dedicated

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Lady Davis Comprehensive Municipal Technical High School was dedicated here yesterday. The ultra-modern structure cost IL13m., financed mainly through contributions raised by the Histadrut in Canada and by donations made the brothers Bernard and Louis Bloomfield, who attended the ceremony.

The school, which will be in the Amal Vocational School System, will have room for 1,500 pupils as well as for another 500 junior high school youngsters. It includes the largest printing school in the country, as well as electronics and mechanics workshops.

Mayor Yehoshua Rabinowitz said that, of the 22,000 high school pupils in this city, 8,500 attended vocational schools last year. There are 37 trade schools around town and the number is growing.

No smoking rule and TV

Smoking is banned in TV studios for safety reasons. However, the rule is not always observed, particularly during a long discussion programme.

This was stated yesterday by the Broadcasting Authority spokesman when terming "inaccurate" a report by the Anti-Cancer League that the Authority had forbidden smoking to be screened on TV programmes.

The director of television issued periodical reminders to staff on the importance of observing the no-smoking rule in studios for safety reasons, the spokesman said.

Annulment of Notre Dame sale sought

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Rabbi L. I. Rabinowitz said yesterday that he would call upon the Hebrew University Board of Governors at its meeting next week to seek the annulment of the sale of Notre Dame Hospice in Jerusalem to the Holy See.

Rabbi Rabinowitz, who is a member of the Board as well as a Gahal City Councillor, told a press conference that the sale of the building earlier this month by the University administration had been made without consulting the Governors. His move follows a refusal by the High Court to issue the injunction he had sought to block the transfer of the property.

The speed with which the transaction had been carried out, he said, had prevented either the Board of Governors or the University's Standing Committee from intervening.

Rabbi Rabinowitz expressed concern at the acquisition of Jewish-owned property in Israel by Christian interests. He also said that church authorities were quietly acquiring land around Jerusalem from Arabs.

Lev Yagman in Soviet jail

RAMAT DAVID. — The actual condition of Lev Yagman, one of the Jews sentenced to Siberian prison camp in the 1940s, has been reported in a letter received here this week from Yagman's Kibbutz Ramat David "adviser" Yagman in a programme initiated by the kibbutz movement to aid Zionist prisoners in the U.S.S.R.

Yagman, an engineer, is serving a five-year sentence. In her letter, she said she and her two children were in distress. She said that the letters she had received from the kibbutz had given her hope.

Only 8% want Gahal to disbar

TEL AVIV. — The latest Dahaf shows that only eight per cent of the public think Gahal should be disbanded.

Some 49.6 per cent favoured Herut-led electoral bloc remaining intact, 38.8 per cent said do not understand what is going on inside Gahal, with another 8.2 per cent wishing for Gahal to disband together. Another 3.5 per cent "don't know."

Within the 49.6 per cent, the breakdown was: 26.3 per cent for retaining the status quo in Gahal; 19.6 per cent to enlarge Gahal with other political forces and 3.7 per cent that Herut and the Liberals should each go it alone at the coming elections and then reconstitute Gahal afterwards.
